Kathy Is Found Dead; Drowned in 2 Hours After Fall Into Well

Body Is Cramped, Legs Twisted at 95-Ft. Level; Doctor There for Removal

San Marino, Calif., April 10 (U.P.). — Three-year-old Kathy Fiscus died in her underground tomb, and apparently had been dead since Friday afternoon, two hours after she fell into an abandoned well, Dr. Paul Hanson said tonight. He said she had drowned.

Hanson, the doctor who brought the pretty blonde tot into the world, said she probably had been dead since about 6:30 p. m. Friday.

It was at that time that she stopped speaking, two hours after she fell into the 14-inch iron well casing while chasing her sister and cousin through a vacant lot.

Hanson made his announcement over a public address system. A huge crowd, estimated at between 5000 and 10,000 people, left out an audible sigh.

All Asked to Leave

The doctor askel everyone to please leave the scene before Kathy's body was brought to the surface. It finally had been found about 95 feet down in the casing at 6:03 p. m. PST, nearly 50 hours after the child slipped into the well.

"If it were your child, you wouldn't want people here at the last like this," Hansom said over the public address system.

There was absolute silence. The crowd began turning and walking way. It was as though it had been dismissed by the wave of a hand.

David H. Fiscus and his pretty young wife, Alice, said:

"There is nothing we can say to thank the many people whose heartfelt activities and many sacrifices have been made beyond belief on behalf of our family."

Many Risked Death

Hanson expressed gratitude to the hundred or more volunteer workers, many of whom risked death in the faint hope that Kathy might have survived.

Meanwhile, Dr. Robert McCullock, the Fiscus family physician, was at the bottom of a 104-foot rescue shaft to see how the baby's body could be removed without mangling it.

When Kathy was found, her legs were twisted and cramped in such a position in the narrow iron casing that she could not be moved. McCullock was called from St. Luke's Hospital in nearby Pasadena, where he had been awaiting for an ambulance with the child.

Hanson's announcement ended 53½ hours of tension since little Kathy disappeared at approximately 4:30 p. m. Friday. Her disappearance turned a family party into a tragedy.

Only a few hours earlier, she had gone with her mother to the railroad station to meet her aunt and cousins coming for a visit. She still was wearing her pretty pink party dress with white embroidery when she plunged into the abandoned well.

Furnace Leaking Gas

Church Explosion Kills Six, Injures 40 in South Dakota

Marion, S. Dak., April 10 (U.P.).—A gas explosion shattered St. Mary's Catholic Church just before the 9 a. m. Palm Sunday mass today, killing at least six worshipers and injuring more than 40.

A witness said the blast was touched off when two altar boys struck matches to light the altar candles for mass.

State Fire Marshal Arch O'Dell said an investigation showed the small brick church was full of gas because of a basement furnace leak.

The church's shingle roof was lifted in the air and collapsed down onto the pews, buckling in the middle. The brick walls tumbled crazily, some falling inward and some outward.

Only the steeple and the arched doorway remained standing.

Six persons were counted dead in the first few hours after the blast, and a crew of 50 workers dug through the debris for possible additional victims. About 10 of the injured were in serious condition.

The roof was dragged away quickly by bulldozers, however, and searchers doubted that more victims would be found.

Some 30 injured persons were rushed to hospitals in nearby Sioux Falls, Yankton and Mitchell, S. Dak. About a dozen others were reported treated for minor injuries at their homes here.

The Rev. Joseph Zimmerman was putting on his vestments and parishioners were hurrying from the clear sunlight of Palm Sunday into the church when the blast hit.

Father Zimmerman suffered a leg injury and possible broken ribs.

The Red Cross set up a relief headquarters and Bishop William O. Brady of Sioux Falls rushed with aides to the scene.

House Group Gets Farm Plan Today

'Parity of Income' Substitute Program Faces Lengthy Study

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Administration's proposed "parity of income" substitute for the present farm price support system will get its first going over before the House Agriculture Committee today.

Charles F. Brannan, Agriculture Secretary, who presented the startling new proposal to the joint session of the House and Senate Agriculture Committees Thursday, will be the first witness. He will be questioned for several hours—maybe for several days—on his plan.

Brannan's proposal promises to stir up more discussion than any farm legislation in years. Most members of Congress have withheld comment upon the program, awaiting further study, although the author of the legislation it would supersede, Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.), blasted it with a long attack on the day Brannan unveiled the idea.

In presenting it, Brannan reiterated that the "suggested methods of operation" of the plan are "not new in principle, and few are new in practice."

"If there is anything new in what we proposed," Brannan declared, "it is the recommendation that we actually start our computations with an income criterion as the base on which price supports are determined.

"We have had income criteria in our laws—so-called parity income definitions—but so far we have not used them. Since income is what finally counts, I think it is time to start relating support prices to an income standard."

Parity income, Brannan asserts, is defined in the Aiken bill, the Agricultural Act of 1948, as that income which will provide farm people with standards of living afforded persons in other gainful occupation.

In developing a standard for farm income support which can be translated into a farm price schedule, Brannan sought a formula based on recent experience, rather than one "related or chained back to some distant base period." In other words, he modernizes a formula that goes back to the pre-World War I period of 1909-1914.

Changes in agriculture have made the old measures for determining parity obsolete. For instance, 15 years ago a potato farmer was happy who got an

Marshall Fund To Be Cut 10%, Senators Say

Prediction Is Made By Appropriations Committee Members

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Three members of the Senate Appropriations Committee predicted yesterday that the Marshall Plan appropriation would be cut by at least 10 per cent in their committee.

Authorization for the aid program was passed by the Senate last week and its approval by the House is expected soon. Funds for the $5,580,000,000 project must be appropriated in a separate measure.

On the House side, meanwhile, Representative O'Konski (R., Wis.) announced he would move to have Spain included in the bill on the House floor. Support for O'Konski's move was indicated by an anonymous member of the Foreign Affairs Committee who predicted it would be approved, even though contrary to the Administration's desires.

That the bill itself would pass the House without difficulty has been forecast by leaders of both parties. They said they hoped to bring it to a vote by late today.

Even should O'Konski's move to include Spain be rejected, one major difference between House and Senate versions may have to be ironed out. The present House bill authorizes 200 million dollars less than the measure enacted by the Senate.

The three Senate Appropriations Committee members who foresaw heavy slashes in funds voted for the Marshall Plan for the next 15 months. All said the bill would be carefully studied in their committee.

Senator Russell (D., Ga.) said he felt sure the committee would

Attlee Blames World Split On Kremlin

Laborite, Speaking In Glasgow, Praises North Atlantic Pact And Marshall Plan

Glasgow, Scotland, April 10 (AP).—Prime Minister Clement Attlee ripped into Russia today with a declaration that "responsibility for dividing the world rests squarely on the shoulders of the rulers of the Kremlin."

The usually mild Labor Government chieftain chose bitter words for an address at a party rally in this shipbuilding center of Britain, where Communists are strong.

"There is no personal freedom in Russia; there is the all-pervading oppression of the police," said Attlee. "There is no freedom of election. Only the single list of the single party is allowed. There is no freedom of speech or even of thought."

Communists, he declared, are "more reactionary than some of the old tyrannies which we knew in the past."

Halls Atlantic Pact

Attlee gave unreserved approval to the Atlantic treaty, saying it is supported by "the vast majority of the people of this country."

"The only exceptions," he said, "are the Communists and their fellow travelers, and a few eccentrics whose hostility to the United States blinds them to reality."

"This pact is not aggressive," he declared. "It is purely defensive.

"Those who attack it as offensive do so from a bad conscience. They take just the same line as the Nazis did when every attempt by the nations to get together was denounced as the encirclement of Germany."

He said Russian use of the veto in the United Nations has stopped all action "which was not completely in accord with what the Soviet government wanted," and added:

"If we cannot get an effective all-in collective security, we must get what we can."

"We should have welcomed the cooperation in the Marshall Plan of the countries of eastern Europe, for we have no wish to have a divided world," he said. "The responsibility for dividing the world rests squarely on the shoulders of the rulers of the Kremlin.

"We do not give up hope of reuniting the world, but it can only be if the Communists give up their ideological imperialism, their attempt to bring the whole world into line, to confine every single person within the straitjacket of Marx-Leninism."

"The countries of eastern Europe wanted to partake, but after a slight hesitation the veto of Russia came down. The satellite countries were not allowed to accept," he said.

Sinclair Denies Claim He's Friend of Russia

Los Angeles, April 10 (AP). — Author Upton Sinclair issued a statement today repudiating an assertion by a Soviet official that he should be listed as a writer of the capitalistic world who became a friend of the USSR.

Sinclair said he was answering a recent statement by Alexander Fadeyef, general secretary of the Union of Soviet Writers.

"The rape of the Czechoslovakian democracy destroyed the last trace of hope I had of any good to come from the Soviet Union," said Sinclair. "Russia is a slave state, and the greatest hope for a continuation of our civilization lies in the Atlantic pact supported by free countries and other free peoples."

Royall Says Europe Asks More Troops

Leaders Emphasize Desire for Ground Forces, Secretary Informs Congress

By The Associated Press

An increase of American troops in Europe if possible has been suggested to Secretary of the Army Royall by leaders abroad, it was disclosed yesterday.

Royall said several western European nations are stressing the importance of ground forces in their defense planning. He visited them last winter and told his story March 7 to the House Appropriations Committee. It has just given his testimony to the House for study.

Meanwhile, Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) demanded yesterday to know whether this country intends to transfer 150 B-29 bombers to England as part of the program to help Europe rearm.

Bridges, top Republican on the Senate Appropriations Committee, told a reporter he probably would not oppose such a move if the Nation's military leaders deem it necessary for American security.

"But I want to know how much the cost of such a transfer would be, and I want to know it in terms of what we have to pay for such bombers—not in terms of how they might be charged off as surplus," the Senator said.

Briton Awaits B-29's

There have been reports, so far not officially confirmed, that Britain would like to acquire up to about 200 of the Boeing B-29 Superforts from the United States Air Force. Several hundred are in the United States stockpile.

Bridges said he understands that it costs about one million dollars to deliver each modernized B-29 to the armed forces.

He said he had asked Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) of the Armed Services Committee to find out what he can about any such transfer.

Tydings told a reporter he expects to make an inquiry into the situation next week. He said the question also had been raised by Senator Knowland (R., Calif.). Knowland refused comment. Tydings said he doesn't have any information about the matter now.

Secretary Royall said in his testimony it is essential for the United States to be able to maintain a foothold on the Eurasian continent (where Russia controls most of the area from mid-Europe eastward to the Pacific).

Need U. S. Ground Help

Discussing his talks with "leaders of several western European nations," he commented:

"No one who has been there would want to risk our destiny in war on the ability of the nations of Europe or Africa, or any point in Asia, to hold back an invading force without our help on the ground. . . .

"Therefore, with complete unanimity the leaders that I talked with urged the necessity of American forces on the European Continent, and the necessity of increasing those forces, if possible.

"They are acutely aware of the capability of danger. They realize they do not have, either individually or collectively, the forces which could prevent armed aggression from the East, and they look to us for necessary assistance."

Royall did not identify the European leaders he talked with.

(The Army has disclosed it has about 96,000 men in the U. S. zone of Germany, but has planned to reduce the total during the next year to about 92,000. A force of about 5000 men in Trieste, the state at the northern end of the Adriatic,

Labor Reverses 'Severe'

Conservatives Pile Up Gains In British County Elections

London, April 10 (AP).—Conservatives continued to pile up substantial leads over British Labor Party candidates as returns came in slowly today from last week's county elections in England and Wales.

Labor Party tabulations in 55 of the 62 counties indicated the Labor Party had suffered a net loss of 253 councilmen, and Conservatives had taken over control of local administrations in such counties as Middlesex, Essex and Northumberland.

[Morgan Phillips, Labor Party secretary, was quoted by the United Press as saying: "The results are a challenge to the entire Labor movement. Few of us expected the losses to be so severe. It is by no means a challenge to our political philosophy, but it is a warning that we cannot ignore."

[The county council elections did not affect the government directly, but Conservatives considered them a good test of the temper of the people and some observers regard them as a forecast of next's year's general elections.]

Almost everywhere, in a comparatively light vote, Labor's position weakened, but the party retained control in Monmouth, Durham, Glamorgan, Derbyshire and Nottinghamshire. Labor won Carmathen.

In all rural elections independent candidates played a more conspicuous role than in London County, where last Thursday Conservatives and Laborites ran a dead heat, each winning 64 places on the council and a precarious balance of power falling to a lone Liberal Party victor.

The Conservative Party central office, which was not tabulating results today, said that, excluding the counties which voted Saturday, the party had already gained 202 seats and had lost 14.

Labor Party to Take Offensive This Week

London, April 10 (NYHT) — After a week of unexpected political retreat—first the shock and dismay which greeted Sir Stafford Cripps' budget and following that the heavy setbacks in local elections—the Labor party this week will go over to the offensive.

A statement of party policy, on which Labor will base its campaign in 1950, is to be issued Tuesday. Despite the strong swing to the right indicated in the local election results still coming in today, the party policy statement will come down firmly on the side of more socialism.

Press and Stereotype Unions Vote to Strike Capital Papers Today

Publishers' Statement

Statement of the Washington Publishers' Association on the strike of Pressmen and Stereotypers:

Union pressmen and stereotypers will be withdrawn from the four Washington daily newspapers this morning according to information given to Peyton R. Evans, Executive Secretary of the Washington Publishers' Association at 6:20 p. m. Sunday, by C. V. Ernest, International Vice President of the Pressmen's Union, and Leo J. Buckley, International President of the Stereotypers' Union.

The pressmen had terminated negotiations on Saturday, but no notice or warning had been received from the stereotypers.

The last meeting with the stereotypers was held on April 6, during the unauthorized strike of the pressmen, and was attended by Mr. Buckley.

Since the work stoppage of last Wednesday negotiations continued between representatives of the four Washington newspapers and the Pressmen's Union until 1:00 p. m. Saturday, April 9, when the Union Committee handed the Publishers a letter "giving notice of termination of negotiations." During the course of the negotiations the Publishers again offered the Union a wage increase of six dollars per week and a third week of vacation to employes of five or more years of service, a settlement similar to that previously accepted by the Printers and the Photo-Engravers. The Publishers agreed also to recognize the Pressmen's Union as the collective bargaining representative of Fly Boys, a matter which heretofore had been pending before the National Labor Relations Board.

When the Union rejected the Publishers' proposal the Publishers again offered to submit the entire dispute to arbitration. The Union again flatly rejected the offer to arbitrate.

The Union has attempted to justify its refusal to arbitrate with the incredible statement that "arbitration has been abused in Washington."

Actually the pressmen and the Publishers have resorted to arbitration only once during the last ten years.

The notice of strike by the pressmen marks the end of ten weeks of negotiations.

The pressmen's original proposal contained suggested changes in virtually every section of the old agreement.

The pressmen demanded a wage increase of $20.90 per week for day work and $27.15 per week for night work.

In addition, the pressmen demanded a reduction in the hours of work from a 7½-hour day and 37½-hour week to a 7-hour day and 35-hour week; in other words a salary of $100 for 35 hours work on the day shift and $110 for 35 hours work on the night shift. They demanded also double time for overtime instead of time and one-half; also double time for a sixth day of work regardless of the number of hours previously worked in a week; also double time for every double shift within a 24-hour period; also a substantial increase in the number of men required to operate each press; also a pension of $25 per week to all employes who have attained age 55 and who have had 15 years of service; also severance pay, sickness and accident benefits, and other demands, the total representing a more than 100 per cent increase in the cost of operating the publishers' pressrooms.

The principal issues over which negotiations with the pressmen broke down were the union's demands for a wage increase of $8 per week, a reduction from the present 7½-hour day and 37½-hour week to a 7-hour day and a 35-hour workweek, and increased manning of the presses in the face of an already existing shortage of experienced pressmen.

The union demanded a substantial increase in the number of persons required to operate the presses over those contained in the expired agreement. This demand was made despite the fact that there have not been for many years sufficient pressmen available in Washington to fulfill the existing manning requirements except by working six and seven days a week and by the unique device of transferring from paper to paper for the purpose of working two or more "short" shifts in the same day.

A "short" shift occurs when a pressman, in order to fulfill the union's manning requirements, leaves one pressroom before the end of the shift and reports to another pressroom after the shift there has been in progress for several hours.

However, he is paid by each paper for a full 7½-hour shift and in addition receives overtime pay if either press crew on which he has worked is required to work overtime.

Under this arrangement it is possible for an individual pressman to receive two full shifts' pay, plus overtime, for less than one shift of actual work.

In the face of this existing manpower shortage, the union further proposed a reduction in the workweek from 37½ to 35 hours. This could only result in a tremendous increase in overtime pay.

In 1948 there were less than 100 pressmen regularly employed on the Washington newspapers.

In 1948 the minimum annual contract wage of these pressmen was $4113. In practice, however, the actual earnings ranged to over $8600. A majority had annual earnings in excess of $5000.

Negotiations with the stereotypers, which began November 9, 1948, were concluded on April 6, 1949, with the publishers still offering a wage increase of six dollars per week and a third week of vacation to employes with five or more years of service and the union demanding a wage increase of nine dollars per week and a reduction of the workweek from 33½ to 32½ hours. These differences were understood to be the only issues which prevented agreement with the stereotypers.

A number of other amendments to the contract sought by the stereotypers had been agreed to previously by the Publishers.

The Publishers are convinced that their offer to both the pressmen and the stereotypers is completely fair and more than equitable in the face of existing economic conditions.

Nevertheless, they have felt that in the public interest, and

Pressmen's Statement

A statement issued by Charles Ernest of the Pressmen follows:

A special meeting of the Washington Pressmen's Union No. 6 was held on Sunday, April 10, 1949, for the purpose of hearing the report of its Wage Scale Committee, composed of its local committee and a subcommittee of three vice presidents of the Board of Directors of the International Union. They voted unanimously to reject the proposal of the publishers with the result that by secret ballot the union voted 115-0 to withdraw the services of its members from the pressrooms of the Washington Newspaper Publishers' Association, effective Monday, April 11. Strike sanction has been granted by the board of directors of the International Union.

The text of the pressmen's telegram to the publishers, signed by George T. Walker, president, and Henry W. Pettis, secretary of Local No. 6, follows:

This is to advise you that the Washington Web Newspaper Pressmen's Union No. 6 by unanimous action are withdrawing the services of its members as of Monday, April 11, 1949. This action has been indorsed by the board of directors of our International union.

Ching Intervenes In Hope of Averting Action Scheduled For 8 This Morning

BULLETIN

Director Cyrus Ching of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service and three top conciliators were meeting early today at the Labor Department with representatives of newspaper pressmen and publishers in a last minute effort to avert a strike set for 8 a. m. today.

Representatives of stereotypers were in another room in readiness for a call for a conference with the Government and publishers. A spokesman for the Government said the Mediation Service planned to keep the parties "talking as long as possible in hopes of effecting a settlement."

AFL pressmen and stereotypers yesterday voted to strike the four Washington daily newspapers starting at 8 a. m. today.

The two unions acted during separate four-hour closed-door meetings starting shortly after 2 p. m. at Pythian Hall, 1012 Ninth st. nw.

The strike word was telephoned to Peyton Evans, executive secretary of the Washington Publishers' Association, by Charles V. Ernest, international vice president of the Pressmen's union, and Leo J. Buckley, president of the Stereotypers. The two union officials told Evans that they were sending a confirming notice by telegram.

Pressmen involved	140
Stereotypers involved	50
Other workers affected	5000
Combined daily circulation of four newspapers	780,000

Later Ernest announced the pressmen's vote to strike was 115 to 0.

Setting the deadline at 8 a. m. permitted regular publication of today's Washington Post and morning editions of the Washington Times-Herald. It was expected to prevent regular publication of the afternoon editions of the Times-Herald, the Washington Evening Star and the Washington Daily News.

Arbitration Rejected

Spokesmen for the publishers disclosed that they had offered to arbitrate the two disputes during final negotiation sessions last week.

In the case of the pressmen, the arbitration offer was presented Saturday afternoon, and was promptly rejected.

In the case of the stereotypers, the arbitration offer was made through a Federal conciliator.

Washington publishers offered both unions $6 weekly increases and a third week of vacation for employes with more than five years' service. Similar terms had been accepted previously by the

Bill Would Give 5000 Civilians Air Force Jobs

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The Air Force would be able to hire about 5000 additional civilian employes under the defense supply bill which was recommended to the House Saturday by its Appropriations Committee. It was given $1,455,000 more for salaries than was recommended by the Budget Bureau.

In contrast, the committee recommended minimum reductions of about 6000 each in civilian personnel staffs of the Army and Navy. A $500,000 cut was made in the salary allowance of the National Security Resources Board.

The office of the Secretary of Defense was given an increase of $2,200,000 for salaries and expenses—enough to hire about 500 additional employes here. The Air Force also would add about 500 here. Small reductions would be made by the Army and Navy.

Osborn Astounds Doctor

Bridegroom of Day, 89, Rallies After Severe Heart Attack

Poulan, Ga., April 10 (AP).—Former Governor Chase S. Osborn of Michigan made another of his amazing rallies late today, his doctor reported, and is "resting comfortably."

Dr. J. J. Crumley stressed, however, that the 89-year-old bridegroom of a day still is in grave danger. Earlier he reported Osborn near death.

Dr. Crumley said "It's a miracle" the way the former Governor responded to a blood transfusion and a glucose injection late in the day.

"His stamina is almost unbelievable," the doctor added.

The aged explorer, author and philanthropist married his adopted daughter, Stellanova, 55, yesterday. The ceremony was performed at his home, Possum Poke, near here.

Dr. Crumley said Osborn suffered a heart attack shortly after the ceremonies and had five or six hemorrhages during the night. He said, however, excitement was no factor in the former Governor's decline.

Osborn is in a semi-conscious condition and has been in an oxygen tent for several hours.

At 4 a.m., Osborne summoned

300 Ask President To Talk With Reds

By The Associated Press

An open letter, bearing 300 names, yesterday called on Congress to reject the North Atlantic treaty as a step toward war and urged President Truman to open direct talks with Russia.

The letter said that "if the present pattern of measures and counter-measures by our country and Russia persists, it can lead only to a war which neither nation can win and in which mankind may be destroyed."

It was made public here by Bishop James C. Baker of Los Angeles, president of the Council of Bishops of the Methodist Church; Clarence E. Pickett, secretary of the American Friends Service Committee, and T. O. Thackrey, former editor and publisher of the New York Post-Home News.

Say It Will Widen Split

The letter said the North Atlantic Pact, newly signed by 12 non-Communist western nations, "will widen the split in the world between the two armed camps" and should be rejected by Congress.

The pact, signed here last Monday, must be ratified by the United States Senate, President Truman has said he will send it to the Capitol shortly.

Looking toward Russian-American talks to settle differences, the letter said:

"We urge (that) the President, through a special emissary to the Soviet Union, prepare the way for a meeting between the mightiest ranking authorities of the two governments."

"Must Live Together"

The signers said such discussions should:

Establish mutual confidence; prepare the way for peace treaties with Germany and Japan; provide for resumption of trade between East and West; provide firm commitments against interference in affairs of other nations; establish that aid to needy peoples of the world be administered through the United Nations.

"We are deeply convinced," the signers said, "that capitalism and communism not only can but must live together in the same peaceful world. No dispute between the United States and Russia need be resolved by force, and there are no differences between them which in time cannot be settled by peaceful negotiations."

Those signing the letter included religious leaders, educators, businessmen and citizens of 33 states and the District of Columbia.

Among them were:

Emily Greene Balch, Nobel prize winner and honorary president of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, Wellesley, Mass.; Dr. Frederick K. Irish Minister Here for Talks With Acheson

By the United Press

Sean MacBride, Irish minister of external affairs, arrived here last night for a conference with Secretary of State Dean Acheson before starting a transcontinental trip with speaking engagements.

MacBride said he would have "a general talk" on foreign affairs with Acheson and might possibly see European Recovery Administrator Paul G. Hoffman and some other officials.

He said this was a large part of the purpose of his trip to America but that another important part was to meet speaking engagements before Irish organizations in Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Boston.

Scene of Church Explosion . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

GAS BLAMED—Palm Sunday became a day of grief at Marion, S. Dak., when an explosion at St. Mary's Catholic Church (above) brought death to six persons and injured more than 20 others. The blast occurred just before services began. The toll would have been higher had it occurred a few minutes later when more than 75 other worshippers were due to enter. A faulty gas furnace was blamed. The blast occurred when the furnace was turned on whack at least 10 per cent from the sum authorized.

Senator Bridges (R., N. H.), leading minority member, looked for a slash of 500 million to one billion dollars.

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, Republican floor leader as well as a member of the committee, said every item of the proposed appropriation would be thoroughly studied. He added that every item which could not be justified would be cut.

While aid to Europe moved slowly through the legislative machinery, the Economic Cooperation Administration announced that the steel industry was "setting the pace" for recovery in Marshall Plan nations.

Reviewing what it called the steel industry's "outstanding production record" during the first year of foreign aid, ECA estimated its output at the end of 1948 reached an annual rate of 43,200,000 metric tons, only 6 per cent below the prewar average.

VICTIM—Seriously burned in the St. Mary's Church blast, Phil Wachendorf is comforted by his wife in the hospital at Sioux Falls, S. Dak. He said: "I pulled the (furnace) switch and the church exploded." His wife and two children were in the church but not injured

Tydings Hits GOP 'Sitdown' On ForeignAid

Baltimore, April 10 (AP).—Senator Tydings (D., Md.) today chided Republican members of the Senate for staging what he called "a sort of sitdown strike" on the foreign policy of the United States.

Referring to the "two solid weeks of long daily sessions" in the Senate discussing extension of the European Recovery program, Tydings declared in a radio speech: "There seemed to be a general agreement among the Republicans to string out this debate as long as possible."

He said "The delays seemed almost interminable even though" it was estimated that when the roll was called there would be only 10 or 12 votes against the proposition in the Senate."

Tydings declared that some of the arguments presented by the Republicans against the European aid bill "seemed almost childish," and he cited a charge that Britain's share of the money would be used to socialize British industry.

He disputed that argument, saying that, in fact, the Marshall Plan aid is tending to slow down the trend toward socialism in Britain.

"This is true," he said, "because Marshall Plan aid relieves some of the economic extremities of the British people. As their economic difficulties are removed, the demand for socialism correspondingly subsides."

facing Yugoslavia, will remain unchanged.)

Secretary of State Acheson stated over the weekend that he had no reason at this time to believe that occupation forces would be either greater or smaller as a result of the three-power agreement by Britain, France and the United States to end military control when a western German federal republic is established.

Because Royall's testimony was given on March 7 and Acheson's statement only three days ago, there seemed to be reason to believe that the reported Western European leaders' idea has not been favorably received here.

Brewster-Led Group Requests Truman to Act Against Dutch

By the United Press

A group of Republican Congressmen headed by Senator Brewster (R., Me.) have signed a petition calling on President Truman to seek firm United Nations action against the Dutch in the Indonesian dispute, it was disclosed yesterday.

The petition may be made public today. Senate Republican Leader Wherry, of Nebraska, is among the signers.

While Brewster refused to discuss the petition before it is delivered, it is understood to call for enforcement measures, such as economic sactions, to back up previous U. N. Security Council orders to the Dutch to cease military operations in Indonesia.

The $5,580,000,000 foreign aid bill which the Senate passed last week, includes a provision for cutting off aid to any nation "against which the United Nations is taking preventative or enforcement action."

That language, proposed by Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) was written into the bill as a substitute for an amendment offered by Brewster which would have cut off all American recovery aid to the Dutch immediately.

Brewster has argued that the United States is indirectly financing Dutch actions in Indonesia. He points out that the Dutch are due to receive about 360 million dollars in Marshall Plan funds the next year—about the same amount they have been spending a year on the Indonesian war, he said.

Republican backers of Brewster's petition hope for some Democratic support.

Conservatives Pile Up Lead

Union Congress general council will meet this week to discuss its attitude toward the Cripps budget, which left taxes unchanged but will increase living costs through curtailment of the food subsidy program. The TUC will be under strong pressure from various unions to press for some relaxation, if not abandonment of the Cripps voluntary wage freeze policy which the unions have been supporting with surprising effectiveness for the last 12 months.

Despite pressure from within, the TUC is expected to reaffirm its support of the wage freeze.

Labor Party leaders feel that on the whole the heavy losses in the week's county elections were the result of unconsidered, emotional reaction of the voters to the budget They say that if the elections had been held even 10 days after Budget Day, instead of the next day, people would have had time to reflect on the broader issues of economic stability which the budget involves, and not just vote Conservative because there was no tax reduction.

They argue also that local elections are usually more likely to prove "protest elections." Because local elections are never fought on the basic issues of national policy, the results are likely to go against the party in power without actually reflecting the judgment of the voters on Labor or Conservative national policies.

The party policy statement is expected to add water supply, sugar refining and cement production to the list of nationalized industries, and include a "blank check" platform plank under which the voters would be asked to indorse the Government's right to add other industries as they see fit in the next term of office.

Germans Resentful Of Allied Statute

Bonn, Germany, April 10 (AP).—The occupation statute, a substitute peace treaty for west Germany, was handed the Germans today. It received a cool reception.

The statute offers the Germans "self-government to the maximum possible degree consistent with" occupation. But it bristles with restrictions and reservations.

The German press, commenting on the basis of an advance outline of the contents, greeted the document without enthusiasm. Continued Allied control of German trade and industrial research were the chief sore points.

Charge Fear of Competition

Berlin's Sozialdemokrat said the occupation powers were afraid of German competition.

Political leaders agreed to withhold comment for 48 hours.

The document was handed over without ceremony by French, British and American liaison officers to Dr. Konrad Adenauer, president of the parliamentary council which has the task of drafting a constitution for a West German government.

Half an hour later, Dr. Carlo Schmid, Social Democrat leader in the council, rushed into Adenauer's office. He appeared angry, as though he had not been notified immediately.

He was followed a few minutes later by Jacob Kaiser, Berlin leader of the Christian Democratic Union.

Germans Look Solemn

The Allied representatives left after 15 minutes. The German leaders stayed only half an hour longer. Schmid and Kaiser looked solemn. The face of Alfred Schoenfelder, vice-president of the council, was hotly flushed.

Adenauer called the council's occupation statute committee to meet Monday. The committee will confer Tuesday with minister presidents (governors) of the German states. The council will issue a communique Wednesday.

A delegation from the council is expected to confer with the British, French and American military governors Thursday.

In its comment, Sozialdemokrat said continued Allied control over German scientific research was "intolerable."

Socialist Paper Follows Line

"The German economy will be able to compete on world markets only if it is allowed to develop its industries technically," declared the newspaper.

The Socialist Telegraf in Berlin took a similar line, and added that Allied control of Germany's foreign relations left her far from equal cooperation in European reconstruction and the United Nations.

As expected, the Soviet-licensed ADN news agency said the provisions would leave a West German government "completely impotent."

The occupation powers keep control over disarmament, foreign affairs, the Ruhr which was Hitler's arsenal, reparations and restitution of looted property, the program to decartelize or break up big business combines, displaced persons, custody of persons convicted in occupation courts such as war criminals, security of Allied occupation forces, and the right to enforce respect for the constitution.

Occupation Authority Reserved

The Germans have full executive, legislative and judicial rights in all other domestic fields.

But, the occupation powers have the right to resume "full authority" if that is essential to their own security, to preserve German democratic government or fulfill their international obligations.

They also keep a veto over any changes in Federal or State Constitutions, and over any laws inconsistent with the Constitutions or the "basic purpose of the occupation."

The occupation powers pledge respect for the civil rights of Germans against arbitrary arrest, search, seizure and unfair trial, however, and promise a review of the statute after a year.

Russians Grill 3 U.S. Soldiers For 12 Hours

Berlin, April 10 (U.P.).—Three American soldiers, arrested by the Russians in a raid on a Berlin hotel, were released today after being detained at Soviet headquarters for 12 hours.

The soldiers said Russian interrogators had asked them the strength of their Berlin units, the number of officers in their outfits, where they lived in the United States, and the economic status of their families in America.

The soldiers were picked up last night while celebrating a birthday party with two German girls in a hotel on the border between the American and Soviet zones. The girls were believed to be still in Russian custody.

The soldiers were Sergt. John Hajduk, Johnstown, Pa., Corpl. William R. Britt, Whitney, Pa., and Corpl. David Boges, Green Bay, Wis.

Bulgaria Rejection Of Yugo Note Reported

Sofia, Bulgaria (Monday) April 11 (U.P.).—The foreign ministry announced today Bulgaria has rejected Yugoslavia's note of March 12 alleging Bulgarian violations of the Yugoslavia's note of March 12 alleging Bulgarian violations of the Yugoslav border.

The government declared Yugoslavia's charges were not true and countercharged that Yugoslavia seven times had violated the November, 1946, border agreement between the two countries.

Bulgars Send U. S., Britain Stiff Protests

Sofia, April 10 (U.P.)—The Bulgarian Foreign Office sent strongly worded protest notes to Britain and the United Nations late last night protesting alleged foreign interference in her "internal questions."

In a cabled protest to U.N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie, Foreign Minister Vassil Kolarov said the U.N. had no business discussing "imaginary restrictions of religious and other freedoms in Bulgaria."

Simultaneously, the government released the text of a note to Britain flatly rejecting as completely groundless a recent British protest against the trial of 15 Protestant pastors sentenced to prison for alleged treason, espionage and black marketeering.

The note folowed a renewed demand that Britain recall D. A. Greenhill, first secretary of the British Legation in Sofia, for his alleged complicity with the defendants in the pastors' trial.

In the second such demand since mid-March, the government said Greenhill was persona non grata. British officials here said they viewed the incident "in a very serious light."

The note to Britain said Britain's attack upon "Bulgarian justice" was "against the principle of equal respect for the sovereignty of institutions of countries having regular diplmatic relations."

The protest to the U. N. declared that the sponsors of a U. N. discussion on Bulgaria's "imaginary restrictions" on religious freedoms are being unfair since Bulgaria is not a member of the U. N. and does "not have the rights and guaranatees necessary to defend itself."

Leftist Leaders Call Strike in Australia

Sydney, Australia, April 10 (U.P.). Leftist leaders of the Miners and Dock Workers Unions have ordered a Nation-wide strike of their 40,000 members Monday to protest the jailing of Communist L. J. McPhillips, a union official.

Anti-Communist sections of both unions immediately began organizing members to defy the strike call.

Tito Man Blasts Cominform

Belgrade, April 10 (NYHT).—A high Yugoslav official charged the Cominform today with sacrificing the Greek Communist movement in order to undermine Marshal Tito.

The Cominform, with "Bulgarian leaders" occupying an influential position, is "playing" with the Communists of Greek Macedonia by trying to turn them into an instrument for fomenting separatism in Yugoslavia rather than helping them to fight a revolutionary struggle against the Athens government, Lazar Kolishevski, Premier of the Yugoslav-Macedonian Republic said at the congress of the Yugoslav People's Front.

The Cominform action has done "enormous harm" to the Greek revolution, he said.

He assailed the Bulgarians for trying to "make use" of the People's Front Congress of Aegean Macedonia. He was presumably referring to the recent congress of the Communist-run Macedonian Liberation Front which met somewhere in rebel-held Greek territory last month and was reported to have called for a struggle by the Macedonian people for liberation both from Greek and Yugoslav rule. Kolishevski condemned the Cominform demand for "a united and independent Macedonian state within a Balkan federation."

(The region of the southern Balkans known as Macedonia is divided into three parts, which lie in Yugoslavia, Greece and Bulgaria. They are called Vardar, Aegean and Pirin Macedonia respectively. Vardar Macedonia constitutes the Yugoslav Macedonian Republic, one of six federative states under Tito's rule. Pirin and Aegean Macedonia do not enjoy administrative autonomy in Bulgaria and Greece).

GIs in Munich Dispel Parade

Munich, April 10 (U.P.).—American military police used tear gas today to break up an unauthorized anti-Russian demonstration by more than 4000 displaced persons in downtown Munich.

Shouting Ukrainians, Baltic nationals, Poles, costumed Cossacks on horseback and other refugees were marching toward the old site of the Russian Mission here when MPs dispersed them, Army spokesmen said.

Four demonstrators were arrested for trying to tear the gas masks off MPs. No injuries were reported.

Israeli Reply Awaited on Peace Talks

Jerusalem, April 10 (U.P.). — A United Nations Palestine Conciliation Commission spokesman said today that Arab-Israel peace talks would start in Switzerland within three weeks if Israel is willing.

The spokesman said the Arab states had replied favorably to a U. N. proposal that talks be held but that the Israeli government had not answered yet.

He stressed that the U. N. scheme called only for preliminary discussions but that these might lead to a general peace parley.

A U. N. plan for the internationalization of Jerusalem will be submitted to the Switzerland conference, he said.

U. S. Brig. Gen. William Riley, U. N. Palestine chief of staff, arrived here last night to organize a mixed armistice commission and to liquidate the truce observation teams set up by the U.N. to investigate and report on fighting in the Holy Land.

Bunche Optimistic On Peace Chances

Venice, April 10 (AP). — Dr. Ralph Bunche, the acting U. N. mediator for Palestine, told the Italian news agency ANSA he was optimistic for peace in Palestine and the world.

"Only economic problems now remain to be settled in Palestine," ANSA quoted Bunche as saying. "If they are resolved with good faith by both parties, peace can have a long reign in Asia Minor.

Chinese Reds Resume War

Nanking, April 10 (U.P.).—The Communist radio reported tonight that four Red field armies are massing to fight their way across the Yangtze River in a battle that might decide the fate of China.

Nationalist defenders reportedly hurled back the first Communist onslaught today. When Communist units attempted a crossing at Huayang, 175 miles southwest of Nanking, government artillery sank 10 Communist junks and repulsed the attackers, semi-official reports said.

Half a million Nationalist defenders patrolled the south bank of the Yangtze tonight. Tensely awaiting what the Communist radio said would be a crossing to "liberate" the 200 million Chinese in Nationalist areas.

A spearhead of 10,000 Red troops advancing along the north bank of the mile-wide river was reported within 11 miles of Nanking. Communist artillery was in range of the Nanking-Shanghai railway threatening a total blockade of the capital.

The new onslaught, announced only 24 hours after Communist leader Mao Tze-tung had promised "lenient" dealings with the Nationalists, apparently doomed the stalled peace talks in Peiping.

The Red Radio said three armies were massed on the Yangtze's north bank, and a fourth was hastening south from Kiangsu Province.

Before the Communists intensified their push against the Yangtze, government circles had felt more hopeful about a possible peace settlement after a nightlong study of Mao Tze-tung's cable to Acting President Li Tsung-jen. The cable was in reply to Li's offer to give his life in interests of reaching a settlement.

A high official source had commented that concessions made by Mao's "polite" cable represented the first sign of a "change of heart" on the part of the Communists.

500 Expressmen Vote to Stay Out

New York, April 10 (AP). — Some 500 striking employes of the Railway Express Agency voted today not to return to work "for the time being," despite presidential appointment of a fact-finding board to intervene.

The decision to remain away was reached by the express workers after they had been asked to vote by the AFL International Brotherhood of Teamsters, whose members in Local 808 also have been idled by the walkout.

Striking express agency employes are members of the AFL Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks. They called the walkout a month ago after the agency accused them of slowdown tactics. The 500 union members voting today comprise about one-eighteenth of the total on strike.

The dispute centers about a union demand for a 40-hour week to replace the present 44-hour week and a wage increase of 25 cents an hour over the present scale of $1.32 to $1.34.

The teamsters asked for the vote apparently to determine whether the express workers would accept White House intervention in the dispute as a basis for returning to their jobs.

President Truman picked the fact-finding panel yesterday and it will begin its investigation Thursday.

'47 Coal Fund

Lewis to Sue Mine Owners For Benefits

By the United Press

John L. Lewis will file suits against a dozen soft coal companies in a few days to collect unpaid contributions of 20 cents a ton to the United Mine Workers welfare and retirement fund, it was revealed yesterday.

All the claims represent past due payments for 1947 and amount to several hundred thousand dollars.

Suits Over '46 Money

The actions will be a follow-up to suits filed or threatened in Pennsylvania, Illinois and Arkansas for delinquent 1946 payments of five cents a ton under the Government's strike - emergency contract with the union. Four of these five suits have been settled out of court in full, it was reported, bringing more than $100,000 into the fund's treasury.

Additional suits reportedly will be brought to cut down the tardiness of some operators in making payments.

Under the producers' agreement with Lewis, the payments must be made by the 20th of each month following the month in which the coal was produced. Failure to do so may be interpreted as a breach of contract.

Drive for Boost Seen

Lewis' court action is regarded in some quarters as another step in his strategy to build up pressure for an increase in the 20-cents a ton contributions to the welfare fund. He and Senator Styles Bridges, as trustees of the fund, voted over Trustee Ezra Van Horn's objections last week to reduce the miners' retirement age from 62 to 60.

Miners who reach 60 and have retired since May 29, 1946, are eligible for $100 a month pension from the fund. Almost 14,000 miners were receiving this pension on March 1. That is $1,400,000 a month. There was no estimate how much more the lower retirement age will cost.

Atlantic City Hotels Reject U. S. Mediation

Atlantic City, N. J., April 10 (AP). The Federal Government took a hand today at trying to end the Atlantic City hotel strike "in the public interest," but was turned down by management.

Peter J. Manno, United States Conciliator, said he has called representatives of the striking union and the Atlantic City hotelmen to a meeting at his offices in Philadelphia at 2 p. m. Monday.

Irving Gould, strike leader, accepted but Alan Graff, chairman of the Atlantic City Hotel Association, rejected the offer. Graff said he dispute was a purely local one.

Meanwhile the strike of some 2000 members of Local 508, AFL Hotel and Restaurant Employes Union, entered its third day on this Palm Sunday—normally one of the busiest days of the spring at this seaside resort.

The union workers struck against 10 hotels here, but all the hostelries have continued to operate with skeleton crews. The union is seeking a wage increase averaging $1 a day. Present scales are not available.

Officials of the hotels said that despite the strike there were reservations for a great number of persons at Atlantic City hotels today.

Manno said he addressed messages to Irving Gould, president of the local union, and to Allan M. Graff, chairman of the hotelmen's negotiating committee and also owner of the Brighton Hotel.

He has received no replies as yet, he announced.

Murray Blasts Wood's Bill

By The Associated Press

CIO President Philip Murray said yesterday the Wood labor bill is a "foul concoction" that is "more viciously repressive" than the Taft-Hartley Act.

He spoke out as labor issues boiled up again behind the scenes on Capitol Hill.

The Wood bill, introduced by Representative Wood (D., Ga.), is the measure supported in the House by many Republicans and Southern Democrats who are opposed to repeal of the Taft-Hartley law.

The bill would amend Taft-Hartley in a number of ways without removing its essential provisions. It would eliminate two election procedures and extend the non-Communist oaths to employers as well as labor leaders. It would also impose several new curbs on union activities.

Murray said in his statement: "It is inconceivable that a bill such as this paste-pot-and-scissors proposal of Representative Wood should receive serious consideration by members of the Eighty-first Congress.

He called upon Congress to "repudiate quickly" the Wood bill. And he closed this way:

"It is time for Congress to pay attention to the November mandate of the American people, and to move decisively to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act and to adopt the entire Fair Deal program."

2 Ship Unions Set Down By NLRB Ruling

By The Associated Press

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday made its first ruling in a jurisdictional dispute involving the crew of a ship.

It ruled against two unions—the Marine Cooks & Stewards (CIO) and the Pacific Coast Firemen (unaffiliated) — which claimed a traditional right to put their members in steward and engine-room jobs on the West Coast motor ship Rolando.

All ten crewmen of that ship now are represented by the Sailors Union of the Pacific (AFL).

The Board said the other two unions have no traditional or legal right to move in.

Those two unions, claiming jurisdiction over six of the crew, picketed the ship's owner, the Irwin-Lyons Lumber Company, of Coos Bay, Ore.

The ship has been tied up since last September and the company lumber mill and logging camps in Oregon were shut down for two months, the NLRB said. The company charged the unions with an illegal jurisdictional dispute, which is an unfair labor practice under the Taft-Hartley Act.

The unfair practice question still has not been decided.

All the Board did today was to rule that the cooks and firemen had no legal claim to jurisdiction over the crewmen, and therefore had no right to force the company to assign work to the members of the two unions.

AMERICAN FAMILY CLOSE-UP
As they go, so goes the nation!

Reece Around the Clock

From 4 to midnight, Sanford M. Reece works at a South Bend radio station—the high spot of his busy day's program!

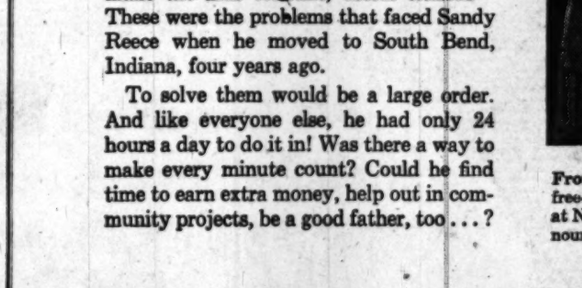
You'll see how to get a lot of living out of 24 hours of day!

How to support a family in spite of high living costs . . . how to become a good neighbor in an "adopted city". . . how to make the kids tolerant, useful citizens—These were the problems that faced Sandy Reece when he moved to South Bend, Indiana, four years ago.

To solve them would be a large order. And like everyone else, he had only 24 hours a day to do it in! Was there a way to make every minute count? Could he find time to earn extra money, help out in community projects, be a good father, too . . . ?

From 9 to noon, Sandy writes radio shows at home. Such free-lance jobs, plus extra broadcasts, radio writing class at Notre Dame, add $1250 a year to his regular pay as announcer. Wife Ginny handles files, helps schedule his time.

Afternoons, Sandy devotes time to his town! He helped arrange YMCA's adult education program, produced school pageant. "Working with your neighbors, you feel more at home," he says.



"Puppet time" for Sandra and Buddy! They're making puppets of their own, and planning a show for neighborhood kids! The Reeces believe that doing things as a family helps the children feel secure.

Between his shows at the radio station, Sandy is active in South Bend's little theatre group. It's a big source of inexpensive fun for him and Ginny. A drama major when he was at college, Sandy directs, Ginny acts, they build the stage sets together . . . and South Bend citizens get good plays!

Like their hours, they "stretch" their money! By such things as smart use of leftovers, Ginny feeds the whole family on $20 a week. House costs $65 a month. Their life insurance program is budgeted at $60 a month. It was planned with their life insurance agent to include "college fund" for Sandra, Buddy and little Robin. By planning this future for his family and arranging his time to do more than just his job, Sandy Reece is a good neighbor—and a good citizen!

Time for fun with the kids is in Sandy's program too! He's an amateur movie fan. In time to come, his family hopes the novel he's writing will be a best-seller!

THE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES AND THEIR AGENTS

Cooperative League Opens Conference

President Truman yesterday urged closer cooperation among labor, farm and cooperative organizations to help solve the Nation's economic problems.

In a message read at the opening of a four-day conference called by the Cooperative League of the USA, the President said he thought "much work remains to be done before the interdependence of interests" of all the members of national economic groups "is completely appreciated."

Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.) launched the economic action conference by suggesting formation of a committee representing cooperatives, small businessmen, organized labor and organized farmers to confer with Government authorities and develop a plan for attack on monopoly.

Patman Assails Monopoly

Speaking at a dinner meeting of the conference in the Washington Hotel, Representative Patman declared, "We cannot hope to retain our political freedom if we permit our market place to become owned and dominated by monopoly interests."

Representative Patman said he believed an attack on monopoly could be made by application of the principle developed with the Rural Electrification Administration.

"Through this REA principle," he said, "I would hope, and in fact I would demand, that any independent business would have every encouragement comparable with that given to cooperatives."

Senator Aiken Speaks

Senator George D. Aiken, (R., Vt.) also speaking against monopoly, charged that "the monopolistic way of doing business is in effect the totalitarian way. Competition, which is the moving force of free enterprise, is stifled and crushed under the heel of the cartel and monopoly."

"The best defense which the farmer and the little fellow have against monopoly," said Sen. Aiken, "is the cooperative. The cooperative plan, with its dispersal of ownership and control, is the truest form of free enterprise. Cooperatives represent democracy at its best in business."

Senator Aiken said the plan for the St. Lawrence seaway is being "opposed by the vested interests."

St. Lawrence Project

"Surveys have shown," said Senator Aiken, "that where the people have an opportunity to understand the St. Lawrence project they are overwhelmingly in favor of it."

Senator Joseph O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) told those at the dinner that "if the atom bomb is the secret weapon by which we have prevented military aggression from the Kremlin, the Russian secret weapon is the hope that a depression will develop in the United States."

At today's 11:30 a. m. session of the conference Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan will discuss the farmer and his problems. At a 12:15 luncheon at the National Press Club Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) will speak.

Other sessions are planned for 2 p. m. and 4 p. m. today, when needs for electric power and for more fertilizer will be studied.

Democratic Party Best Bet, ADA Tells Liberals

Chicago, April 10 (AP).—The convention of Americans for Democratic Action (ADA) today reaffirmed its traditional independence of political party affiliations. However, the convention held cooperation with the Democrats "offers the best opportunity" for liberals.

The stand was taken in a statement of policy adopted at the convention's closing sessions. The declaration went along with other stands on foreign and domestic policies which generally held that liberalism at home and abroad is the best way "to achieve peace and security."

The political reaffirmation of independence scotched rumors that ADA might merge with the Democratic Party or start a third political party. It said, "ADA should continue its political and organizational independence.

"We recognize that cooperation with the Democratic Party in carrying out the Fair Deal program (of President Truman) offers the best opportunity on the national level for the achievement of liberal purposes.

"We shall continue to work for the nomination and election of candidates . . . of whatever party when their records were consistent with the principles of ADA.

"Ada reaffirms its view that in the present period the formation of a national third party will be injurious to liberal purposes."

The foreign policy declaration favored "action to the greatest possible extent through the United Nations" but added:

The free world continues to face its most massive external challenge from the Soviet Union and its international Communist instrumentalities."

It recommended, however, continued negotiations with the USSR "on questions where genuine agreement is possible." The European recovery program was indorsed.

On domestic policies, ADA supported civil rights, including FEPC, urged abolition of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, supported academic freedom. It urged "strong measures to raise the average income of labor and farmers," including a minimum wage of "at least" 75 cents.

The closing sessions also were addressed by William Green, president of the AFL; and James B. Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer.

Green said that if labor fails to get the Taft-Hartley Act repealed "I am willing to guarantee labor will go out and demolish the coalition of Republicans and Democrats at the polls.

"And let me predict right now that our campaign will get off to an inspiring start when we defeat Senator Taft . . . next year."

The final session elected Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.) as national chairman. Joseph L. Rauh, jr., of Washington, was chosen chairman of the executive committee; and Leo A. Lerner, Chicago, was named treasurer.

Bridges Faces Election Race

San Francisco, April 10 (AP). — For the first time in eight years Harry Bridges today faced opposition for reelection as president of the CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

Bridges, outspoken foe of national CIO policies, was nominated for the office at the closing session of the ILWU's biennial convention early today. Tom George, of Local 8, Portland, Ore., was named to oppose him.

"It's about time we have another name on the ticket," said the delegate who nominated George.

The election will be by referendum.

Before bringing its five-day convention to an end the ILWU adopted some twenty resolutions. They ranged from condemnation of "any (foreign) policy which imposes barriers between peoples and interferes with the peaceful settlement of differences," to militant stands on trade union issues.

By The Associated Press

The plight of little Kathy Fiscus drew heartfelt interest from around the world today—and a snub from behind the iron curtain.

Newspaper switchboards all over the United States were swamped with calls for news of the 3-year-old who dropped down an old well pipe in San Marino, Calif., Friday afternoon. Rescue attempts were headlined in London papers.

But Czechs will not read the story. The government news agency in Czechoslovakia branded the story as being without educational value and purely sensational.

In the United States, the fate of the California tot seemed to be the Nation's No. 1 concern. Prayers were offered at Palm Sunday church services. Newspaper phone operators said the public reaction was greater than any other news story in recent years.

The Albuquerque Journal reported the story received more calls than any since the first atom bomb was set off in New Mexico.

The Minneapolis Tribune said Saturday night that many callers "apparently can't get to sleep until they find out about the girl."

From all over the country came suggestions and offers of services to get the little girl out of the well.

Among those who volunteered to pull her out were an Albuquerque blowpiper, a 102-pound Salt Lake City resident and a Pueblo, Colo., plumber who claimed he can "wriggle around with ease inside a 13-inch pipe." The San Marino well is 14 inches in diameter.

Suggestions for the rescue were widespread.

From Chicago and Baltimore: Drop a sensitive microphone to pick up breathing or a heartbeat.

From Tulsa: Use a portable oil rig to pull the casing out of the ground.

From Chicago: Grease inside of tube, then use a light vacuum to force the girl upward.

From Minneapolis: Drop ice tongs to catch the girl's clothing, pour oil down the sides of the pipe and pull her up.

From Detroit: Coat a man with grease and lower him head first with an oxygen mask.

From New York: Lower a cork floater, then fill the pipe gradually with water and she'll float to the top.

From Buffalo: Freeze the water in the rescue shaft with dry ice, making a solid work foundation and cool work space.

From San Diego: Drop radioactive material down pipe to Kathy, then locate her from rescue hole with a geiger counter.

Kathy Found Dead in Pipe

climaxed two days of heartbreaking heroic work. Volunteer rescuers risked their lives to fight their way more than 100 feet into the ground.

This afternoon, workmen had driven a lateral tunnel from their 104-foot rescue shaft to Kathy's well and peered through a slit at the 94-foot level.

The workmen had driven a lateral tunnel from their 104-foot rescue shaft to Kathy's well and earlier today peered through a slit at the 94-foot level.

Debries found at that level indicated she was stuck in the shaft at a higher point. Then dangerous cave-ins forced them from the lateral tunnel.

At 4:35 p. m. (EST) the cave-ins were controlled by shoring and drilling on the well casing resumed.

Billy Yancey and Bart Herpel, sewer contractor partners, braved death to clear the tunnel of muck and finish shoring it up to prevent further cavings.

When Herpel came out of the rescue shaft and reported the tunnel had been shored up he was greeted by a great cheer.

Kelly, a specialist in hard-rock mining, descended with a pneumatic drill to start cutting operations on the well casing.

A gang of men tugged over an air hose and lowered it to Kelly for his pail of pneumatic drilling tools. Clyde Harp went down to help him.

"The shoring looks good," Kelly said over a loudspeaker from the muck of the tunnel.

Earlier work on the lateral tunnel was delayed four hours when water seeped from the surrounding earth and flooded the shaft. Work was suspended while the water was pumped out and the accumulated debris removed.

"Let's drill, boy," Kelly said to his younger partner when the lateral tunnel was finally cleared. The drill bit suddenly into the pipe and 100 feet above a loud whine came out of the microphone. They took three strokes, then stopped.

"This drill's no good," Kelly complained. "The bit's dull. We haven't got a hole through yet."

The drill was pulled up and the bit replaced and it was sent back down.

The tunnel on which both were lying on their stomachs to drill was 28 inches across.

Could Survive 48 Hours

Dr. Paul Hanson, who brought Kathy into the world, said a child of her age could survive 48 hours or more without food or water. He was sustained by Dr. J. G. Norwood, chairman of the San Marino Red Cross, who believed that if Kathy were unconscious and thus had not struggled she might still be alive.

As workmen neared their goal, preparations were made for bringing Kathy to the surface and rushing her to a hospital.

Dr. Edward Bulley said he would go to the top of the steel casing extending 12 feet above ground out of the rescue shaft when word comes that Kathy has been found.

If Bulley sees signs of life in the little body, he will raise his hands over his head in the victory clasp to tell the waiting crowd of several thousand that all is well.

If Kathy is unconscious and motionless, he will make no signal. But that will not necessarily mean she is dead. Bulley said every effort would be made to revive her as she is rushed to St. Luke's Hospital in nearby Pasadena in an ambulance which has been standing by since yesterday. If Kathy is dead, no announcement will be made until the parents are consulted at the hospital, Bulley said.

At St. Luke's, a private room with a high-sided, cream-colored crib was ready. Dr. Robert McCullock, the family physician, stood by there after hours at the rescue scene.

Neither the parents nor McCullock would give up hope.

"We have to presume she is alive," McCullock said as he paced up and down the emergency room.

Debris Seen in Casing

In the earlier work today, Paul Neiford, a cesspool contractor, crawled through the small connecting tunnel on the rescue shaft and punched two holes into the casing in which Kathy is trapped. He said he saw nothing.

Then Harp, a well digger, and Homer E. (Whitey) Blickensderfer, a former sandhog, went down. Harp said he found a slit in the well casing at about the 94-foot level. Inside, he said, there was a "lot of debris," but no sign of the girl.

The presence of the debris indicated Kathy was above that point.

Cutting operations on the well casing were delayed constantly by cave-ins in the lateral tunnel.

The 100 or more hard-bitten workmen range from successful engineers to sandhogs, miners and jockeys. Many are skilled technicians who earn high wages and premium pay for dangerous jobs. They are doing this one for nothing.

Can't Put Price on Work

"You can't put a price on it," said Raymond Hill, consulting engineer who is bossing the job. "No men who work as hard as these fellows are working, or take as many risks, for any amount of money.

"They are doing it for the little girl, and that's the only way you can put it."

Work on the lateral tunnel began late last night after a huge rotary drill drove a 24-inch shaft 104 feet into the ground. Then a welded steel casing was dropped into the shaft to prevent caving.

Request for Prayers At Well Mouth Refused

San Marino, Calif., April 10 (U.P.). — Thirty people requested permission today to pray for little Kathy Fiscus at the mouth of the narrow well where she is trapped.

Permission was refused to prevent interference with rescue operations.

Washington Post Gets 2000 Calls About Kathy

The Washington Post's telephone operators said they received at least 2000 telephone calls yesterday, many of them from little children, requesting last-minute news of Kathy Fiscus' fate.

No Fun Without Her

Sister Misses Kathy, Keeps Video Vigil

San Marino, Calif., April 10 (U.P.). Nine-year-old Barbara Fiscus missed Sunday school this morning. She said it wouldn't be any fun without her tiny sister Kathy who was imprisoned in a 120-foot well.

Standing in front of her parents' house, she munched a piece of chocolate cake and watched a rescue crew's desperate efforts to save 3-year-old Kathy.

"I wish Kathy was here," she said. "We usually have so much fun on Sundays. We go to church in the morning—or I guess you call it Sunday school. We all usually went to church."

Barbara's short blond hair was held back from her sun-tanned face by a little barrette. She was wearing a pink and white striped dress and dirty white kid shoes and white ankle sox.

She is at loss as to what to do with herself now that Kathy is absent, and a bit confused at all the bustle in the neighborhood.

"In the afternoon Kathy and I used to play with our dog Jeepers and a ball," Barbara said.

"I've been sleeping across the street at the neighbors the last two nights. They wanted me out of the house so I wouldn't bather mother and father."

Barbara said she watched rescue proceedings on a neighbor's television set.

"I can see better that way," she explained. If I went over to the lot I would start sneezing. It's dusty."

"But gosh, I wish Kathy was already out."

Hoover, Patterson Will Testify on Defense Unity

Former President Herbert Hoover, and Robert Patterson, the Nation's last Secretary of War, will give Senators their views today on proposals to tighten unification of the armed services.

Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) said yesterday that both will appear at a public hearing of the Senate Armed Services Committee at 10 a. m. EST.

The committee is considering changes in the Unification Act to give Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson broader powers to deal with the Army, Navy and Air Force.

Brewery Signs Profit Sharing Plan With Union

Bellaire, Ohio, April 10 (AP).—An official of the Matz Brewing Co. said today the firm has signed a union contract to give its employes an annual share in the firm's profits.

A. W. Eick, general manager, said it is believed the first profit-sharing plan in the brewing industry to be written into a union contract. The company will pay employes from its year's profit up to 6 per cent of each employe's wage during that year, after first paying stockholders a 6 per cent dividend.

French Reds War on Pact

Paris, April 10 (U.P.). — The French Communist Party, concluding its annual national convention, adopted a resolution of policy today which called for a "struggle against the Atlantic Pact" and reaffirmed Communist refusal to take part in any war against Russia.

The other aims in the resolution were:

1. No alliance with "German militarists."
2. Safeguard French rights to reparations.
3. Immediate peace with Viet Nam and negotiations with Communist rebel leader Ho Chi Minh.
4. Reestablishment of commercial relations with eastern Europe.
5. Defense of French industry and agriculture against "American competition."
6. Substantial reduction in French military expenditures.

Communist Leader Maurice Thorez and the party's secretary general Andre Marty, addressing the conference, urged "democrats of all political and religious opinions" to unite to avoid war and preserve peace.

Marty declared French Communists must "act now" to combat "preparations for war."

Thousands Ring Girl's Well Prison

San Marino, Calif., April 10 (U.P.). Thousands of curious and sympathetic spectators sweated under a broiling sun today waiting to learn the fate of Kathy Fiscus, entombed 100 feet underground.

Most of them could see nothing from the police lines that held them 100 yards from the 14-inch well in which Kathy was trapped. Some had portable radios to tell them what was going on.

Police set up road blocks for a square mile around the Fiscus home in this swank Pasadena suburb and the 6½-acre vacant tract where the well is. Two hundred officers were at work directing motorists and preventing traffic jams.

The area around the well was crowded by a big red mobile hospital, two cranes, a generator plant, two bulldozers, an oil well drill, power-driven shovels, emergency rescue equipment, police cars, television and radio equipment and newspaper radio-telephone cars.

The best views were from a schoolyard separated from the lot by a fence that ran in one place about 25 feet from the hole. Spectators in the front row said it took about four hours to edge up that far.

Some of the crowd brought cartons of milk. Mothers cradled nursing babies and dozens of couples had pet dogs on leashes or in their arms.

Civil Rights Tag On Housing Sought

Senator Bricker (R., Ohio) served notice yesterday he would try to nail a civil rights provision into legislation to authorize a multi-billion dollar housing program.

Senate Democratic leaders plan to call the bill up for debate in a few days. It provides, among other things, for construction of 810,000 public housing units in six years.

President Truman has been plugging for an even bigger housing program. He wants 1,050,000 public housing dwellings built over a seven-year period.

The President also is backing separately the controversial civil rights program which split the Democratic Party a year ago and still makes Southern congress members see red.

Bricker told a reporter he would offer an amendment to the housing bill which would prohibit any discrimination on the basis of race, creed or color in the renting of public housing.

Bricker offered the same anti-segregation amendment when the bill was before the Senate Banking Committee. It was defeated there.

Senator Ellender (D., La.), one of the sponsors of the housing measure, predicted that Southern Senators won't filibuster the Bricker amendment.

"I feel sure we have the votes to defeat it," Ellender said. "I'm not worried about it a bit."

Bricker fought the public housing program in the last Congress, but the Senate passed the bill. However, like the housing bill approved by the previous Congress, it died in the House.

The House Banking Committee is holding housing hearings.

Rent Control Act Explained To Governors

By The Associated Press

Rent Administrator Tighe Woods said yesterday "When a Governor approves a decontrol action taken by a State Legislature or a local governing body, the action is final." No body can bring back control in such cases.

In a letter to Governors explaining the new rent control law, Woods said local rent advisory boards will continue without reappointment. They are set up as in the past, and their situation is little changed.

Even in areas already decontrolled, Woods said, the boards will remain so they can recommend recontrol if necessary. Some boards disbanded may have to be set up again, he said.

In such cases he will ask former members to serve in a stand-by capacity. If they can't the Governors will be asked for new nominations.

Woods summarized new "home rule" decontrol provisions as follows:

1. When the Governor notifies Woods that the Legislature has made alequate control provisions or wishes to replace Federal with State control, the Federal rule ends the date the State control becomes effective.

2. When Woods is notified that a State law has been passed declaring Federal control is no longer necessary in the State or any part of the State, he will end Federal controls 15 days after notification.

3. The governing body of a city, town or village may find that a rental housing shortage requiring controls no longer exists. The finding must be based on results of a public hearing held after 10 days' notice. The State Governor must approve the body's resolution to make it effective.

If this action results in decontrol of the major portion of a defense rental area, the Rent Administrator must decontrol unincorporated parts of the area.

D. C. Rent Bill

The House conferees did Washington a service by insisting on removing Senator McCarthy's "fair net income" requirement from the District rent control extension bill. Although a similar provision is contained in the national law which took effect April 1, rent control in the District has operated in different fashion from elsewhere in the country. Adjustments have been geared, not to profits, but to increases in landlords' taxes, maintenance and operating expense. Almost 90 per cent of District landlords have received some sort of rent increase in the last seven years.

If now the "fair income" provision should be substituted for the local formula by which rents on comparable properties have been equated, the small staff of the rent administrator would be impossibly overburdened. How, for instance, would a "fair income" be determined on a building that has been sold three or four times under rent control, or on an apartment suddenly converted from unfurnished to furnished? Altogether this vague requirement would mean a return to the confusion of the old Ball Rent Act which Congress threw out as unworkable.

We hope that the Senate will beat down the amendment which Senator McCarthy says he will offer from the floor and that the final act will abandon the specious attempt at equalization with the national law in another particular. Criminal penalties ought to be restored for landlords who violate rent ceilings. Contrary to the substitute provision of the national law which enables the Housing Expediter to sue for triple damages on behalf of tenants, the District measure as drawn would place the burden of civil suits entirely on the tenant. To leave tenants without protection on this score would, in our opinion, compound the confusion by putting a premium on violations.

Top-Level Salaries

Under a bill which is expected to come before the Senate this week, the salaries of Cabinet members would be raised to $25,000, while other top executives and administrators would be put in three groups with salaries of $20,000, $18,000 and $16,000, respectively. By comparison with the salaries paid in comparable private employment, the proposed scale of payments is still very modest. The Federal Government cannot, for obvious reasons, attempt to compete with private industry for the services of qualified executives and professional men. Efficiency demands, however, a scale of salaries that, as the Senate Civil Service Committee says, will not subject competent officials and their families "to economic sacrifices so great as to outweigh the nonsalary incentives and advantages of the Government service."

At present the salaries paid high-ranking Government employes obviously do not meet this simple test of adequacy. That is proved by the reluctance of able men who lack independent sources of income to enter the Government service and by the exodus from Government employment of capable officials. The loss of trained and experienced men comes, too, at a time when the duties and responsibilities of the executive heads of Government agencies are becoming increasingly difficult and men of exceptional ability are needed to insure efficient management.

While some changes in the proposed salary grouping seem desirable, the salary increase bill as a whole is a careful, well-balanced measure that, if enacted, would be of tremendous value. The cost would be slight; only 250 officials are covered by the Senate bill, and the salary increases amount to less than 1.4 million dollars. That outlay would be recovered many times by the gains resulting from the increase in efficiency and improved morale.

Apart from salary increases, the bill also undertakes to adjust salaries on a rational basis, with regard for the nature of the duties and responsibilities of officials. At present some of the most exacting and responsible positions in Government service have lower salary ratings than others of much less importance. The salary scale is, in fact, erratic and illogical due largely to the practice of creating new positions carrying salaries that Congress fixes with slight regard for the prevailing rates of pay for comparable existing positions. This lack of standardization has a bad effect on morale and has been one of the reasons why good men have left the Government service for private employment.

This bill is, as the Senate Committee states, only a start toward a comprehensive revision of the Government's whole salary structure. But general revision is a much more complicated and time-consuming undertaking. Top-ranking Government employes have been denied the advantages of payroll increase given their subordinates, with the result that the gap between the salaries of high-ranking officials and lesser Government employes has been steadily narrowed and in some cases has disappeared. There is no reason for further delay in dealing with this neglected aspect of the salary problem. Indeed, haste is essential to arrest the deterioration in efficiency caused by the retirement to private life of public officials who are disheartened and disgusted by the failure of the Government to provide reasonable salary increases that would to some extent offset the pressure of high living costs.

Question Of Leadership

Confusion over the labor bill seems to deepen with each step taken to bring it to the floor of either the House or Senate. On the House side there is a move to bind Democratic members in a party caucus to vote for the Administration's bill. But the leadership is said to fear the outcome of such a caucus. In any event Democrats who favored the Taft-Hartley Act in their campaigns could not be required by a caucus to vote for its repeal. The basic difficulty is, of course, that the Labor Committee failed to produce a bill that can command the respect of the majority, and this makes it necessary to rewrite the bill on the floor. One Congressman has said that if the House is to work on the Lesinski bill, it will require not less than 60 days of debate. And most likely the end result would be a monstrosity, for consistent and well-balanced legislation on so complicated a subject as labor relations simply cannot be written by a body of 435 members.

On the Senate side the outlook is scarcely more hopeful. The Labor Committee reported out the Administration's bill without considering the amendments that its own members wish to press. Indications are that this bill has less chance of getting through the Senate than through the House. The choice that is shaping up for members of Congress as well as the President is between a labor bill written on the floor, with all the hazards that implies, and no legislation at all at this session. The only hope of averting such a choice now in sight would lie in acceptance of the Taft-Ives compromise, and the idea of signing a labor bill with Senator Taft's name on it could produce only a political nightmare at the White House.

In our opinion, this dilemma is a direct and natural result of too much presidential control. The majority leadership in the House and Senate has not taken responsibility for shaping a better labor-management relations law to take the place of the Taft-Hartley Act. Rather, it has supinely accepted an arbitrary and undigested White House bill that satisfies some of labor's political demands but at the same time threatens to restore most of the abuses that led to enactment of the present law. This is not, we submit, responsible legislative leadership. The top policy-makers of both the Senate and House should have made the President understand that his bill is unsatisfactory, that it has little or no chance of being enacted, and that a new bill would have to be written in the Labor Committee of either the Senate or House. We suspect that failure to make the President understand this will be costly to the Administration in the end.

There seems to be little probability that the effects of this initial mistake can be overcome by compromise on the floor of the Senate or the House. The wise course might yet be to send the labor bill back to the Senate Labor Committee, which is best equipped to write a reasonable measure that would have a good chance for enactment. Considerable time might be saved if this step were taken before either a hopeless deadlock or a hopeless patchwork compels Congress to start again from scratch.

Cerebral Palsy

Washington is estimated to have nearly 800 children afflicted with one of the worst handicaps known to man—cerebral palsy. Little has been heard of these youngsters because it has been generally assumed, until recent years, that nothing could be done for them. Now medical science is findings ways of enabling them to talk, to walk and, in many instances, to live the lives of normal individuals.

Cerebral palsy is a disability of the nerves and muscles caused by damage to those parts of the brain that control the muscles. It is believed that the disabling injury is suffered at birth or prior to birth. In some instances injury to the brain is so extensive as to cause feeble-mindedness, but a majority of the youngsters with cerebral palsy are quite normal in intelligence. Their difficulty lies in the disruption of the communications system between the brain and the muscles. Consequently, they are unable to control muscles that in a normal person function without conscious effort.

No way of repairing damaged nerve tissue has ever been discovered. But the specialists in this field have attained rather striking results by treatments involving the relaxation and training of the muscles. By these means they develop other portions of the brain to take over the functions of the injured part. This involves painstaking study of the individual child's disability for each case is said to be different in some respects from all others—and long periods of special training. In one group of cerebral palsied boys such treatments raised the number who were able to attend regular school from 30 to 77 per cent. Many youngsters who could not walk or talk and had virtually no chance of living normal lives are now on the way to becoming self-supporting citizens.

In the District the Society for Crippled Children, under direction of a reorganized and reinvigorated board, is the source of hope and of new opportunity for the cerebral palsied. Through its sale of Easter Seals it finances clinics that are at once aiding the victims of this disability and at the same time advancing the science of its treatment. Because cerebral palsy has been so little understood in the past and the children suffering from it have been so grossly neglected, we surmise that the society has only to broadcast the facts to obtain a generous response from the public.

Unity On Arms

The five nations of the so-called Western Union in Europe have made a brave and imaginative gesture in addressing a joint request to the United States for military help. Little more than a year has passed since Great Britain, France, and the Low Countries signed a military, political and economic alliance at Brussels. It looked like an alliance of independent sovereignties which hardly deserved the hopeful name of Western Union. But much has happened in the last year, though by no means enough. The five countries have abolished passport visas and a number of other frills of old-fashioned nationalism. They have now given evidence that they are pooling their military resources and are planning their defense as one, since they are asking help as one.

We still have many reservations about the reality of the planning organization at Fontainebleau under Field Marshal Montgomery. Much more will have to be done to integrate the fighting forces of the Atlantic Treaty partners. The treaty itself will have little permanent value unless a true union of the Atlantic peoples can be built upon the present foundations. But almost every week brings signs that a closer union is on the way. Behind the cold and formal language of the joint request last week was an avowal that the days of self-centered nationalism are over. We can thank the Soviet policy-makers for proving to us and to the peoples of western Europe that unless we hang together we shall, assuredly, hang separately.

Mr. Acheson had to be guarded in his answers to the Western Union appeal and to the separate requests that came from Italy, Norway and Denmark. He made no commitment except to say that he would send a program of military assistance to Congress, which, of course, will have the last word. But we hope that the State Department will not be deterred by Senator Connally's timorousness from putting this program frankly and promptly before Congress and the American people. Apparently some on Capitol Hill see this program as more costly and more complicated than it really is. The exchange of notes last week shows that the Atlantic Treaty partners understand the meaning of "self-help and mutual aid." They need American help to supplement rather than to replace their own efforts. So long as the entire program is kept within civilian control, which means kept within bounds, there can be no question that the United States should approve it.

The Unemployed

The union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers challenges the accuracy of the Census Bureau's estimates of persons unemployed. Its own surveys, it reports, indicate that 4,700,000 persons were jobless in March, while the bureau figure is 3,167,000. The chief reason for this discrepancy is the omission from the bureau's estimate of workers temporarily laid off or working only a few hours each week. We cannot agree that those laid off or on short time should be classified as unemployed, especially since a good deal of partial unemployment or temporary idleness is attributable to seasonal factors and is not the result of general business declines. Nevertheless, any sudden or sharp increases in numbers laid off or on short time is significant. Not only does it mean a loss of wages reflected in declining demands for goods, but it also points to a drop in business activity that cannot be attributed solely to seasonal factors.

The Census Bureau found that 21 per cent of the persons classified as employed worked less than 35 hours per week in March compared with 20 per cent on part time in the preceding month. Furthermore, 1.8 million of these so-called part-time workers were in reality idle, being either on vacation, laid off, or waiting to take out new job assignments within a month. Since there is no way of knowing when or whether employes who have been laid off will return to work, it is obvious that a survey of employment conditions and prospects based solely on a study of variations in the numbers of workers classified as unemployed would be misleading.

It is worth noting, too, that, despite a slight decline in the number of unemployed in March as compared with February, the length of time spent by the unemployed in locating new jobs had risen from an average of 8½ weeks in February to 9 weeks in March. The Census Bureau also estimated that at the time of the March survey about 520,000 persons had been in search of jobs for 15 or more weeks as compared with 430,000 persons in similar plight in February and 250,000 in the last quarter of 1948.

Meaning Of The Pact

I have the honor in the name of the Serbian National Committee to extend our sincere appreciation for so great achievement toward the consolidation of the peace, the Atlantic Pact.

We earnestly hope that the Atlantic Pact will not only give security to the countries of western Europe, but will contribute greatly toward the unification of Europe and the liberation of the enslaved peoples of eastern Europe today under the dictatorship of the Communists, no matter what their label may be.

The Atlantic Pact, which shows the determination of the Western democracies to oppose Communist aggression will no doubt give new courage to the enslaved peoples resisting their dictators imposed on them by the Soviets. It will be a milestone toward the lasting peace which can be secured only when the unity of Europe is achieved and its now enslaved peoples are again free to choose without any coercion the government and institutions under which they wish to live.

"Armed Forces Day"

I am very regretful that the trembling you experienced in writing your April 7 editorial in which you recommended abolition of the Army-Navy Game was not sufficiently strong to jar your pen completely out of your hand. I feel that many, many Americans who are interested in top-notch, colorful sporting events cannot help wish that you had never made such an unnecessary and senseless proposal.

I am forced to the conclusion that you have never attended an Army-Navy Game. If you had, I am sure that you would realize that during the day of this annual contest a large number of soldiers and sailors, their friends relatives and well-wishers experience a feeling of comradeship that has only a salutary affect on Army, Air Force and Navy cooperation. Butter And Oleo

"Butter fat was superior to vegetable fats for calves," says the University of Minnesota at the conclusion of a recent comparative feeding trial. The report gones on to say, "At various times many different vitamins were added to the vegetable fat milk. The results were discouragingly and uniformly the same. The calves were somewhat benefited at first by the additions; however, in about 10 days they reverted to their former poor condition and eventually died."

In your March 11 editorial on the subject of oleo controls, taxes, etc., you took the position that butter and oleo were virtually equal nutritionally—which the above experiment effectually refutes.

A further implication in your comments, that the producers of butter were the big lobby, pressure group, is entirely wrong. As nearly as I can determine from testimony before Congress, the 27 manufacturers of oleo had spent 3.5 millions of dollars for newspaper advertising alone while the million of butter fat producers, spent only fractions of such amount on their whole effort to protect their legitimate interests.

The dairymen are not interested in the ¼-cent tax on uncolored oleo; all they want is that a cheaper product of lower nutritional value, not be allowed to be colored yellow in imitation of butter.

The vegetable oils used in the manufacture of oleo are mainly derived from cottonseed, peanuts and soybeans. As you well know the growing of cotton has virtually ruined wide areas of the productive soil of the South by erosion, peanuts are also soil depleting and the soybean is considered by soil experts one of the most destructive crops grown in the Midwest.

Butter is 75 per cent the product of grass and can be nearly 100 per cent by the adoption of certain practices. Grass is not an erosive crop but rather the most rapid builder of soil productivity.

"Atrocities" In Spain

In his letter of March 5, Norman Thomas endeavored to answer my challenge that he furnish proof of the crimes he attributes to my government. He mentions the case of an alleged crime: "On May 21, 1948, 22 Spanish miners were taken from their homes in Asturia by Franco's special brigades of the civil guards. They were accused of being members of the miners' union and Socialist sympathizers. They were thrown into a natural well at Pozu Fumere, drenched with gasoline and dynamited."

In my letter of February 26, I asked of Mr. Thomas for evidence and circumstances. He has complied with my second request, but left unanswered the first.

Mr. Thomas need not appeal to sensationalism when he states "I have the names and family histories of nine of these men sent out at great risk through the underground." Such stories already had been submitted, according to Spanish Anarchist, Communist and so-called Republican sheets of the Spanish exiles in New York, to English diplomatic sources in Gijon and Madrid at least since October, 1948.

Mr. Thomas and any interested readers can check the contradictory accounts of this alleged crime in the Spanish exile press as cited in this letter. I have the results of the investigation carried out at my request by my government about each of the names which Mr. Thomas, it appears, has in his possession. I feel that I am justified in assuming that the names to which Mr. Thomas refers are the same as those listed in Cultura Proletaria of November 6, 1948, and Espana Libre of October 29, 1948.

These persons, to the best of my knowledge, are still alive, for they continue to be sought by the homicide division for the murders of six persons. To call murderers "victims" is as absurd as to accuse United States authorities of being assassins simply because they are on the lookout for murderers.

When I took upon myself a month ago the investigation of Mr. Thomas' charges, I was not surprised to discover that I was unable to find any mention of this alleged crime in the regular dispatches of accredited American news agencies (United Press, Associated Press, International News Service). The crime in itself is horrible enough to draw attention of any newspaper man, and yet more than the time necessary to confirm the incident has elapsed, but no confirmation has been forthcoming. Nor has any report been published on investigations which might have been made by the British Consulate or Embassy in Madrid.

The New York Post of August 18, 1948, gives us the true source of these accusations by attributing them to "Indalecio Prieto, former Minister of War in the Spanish Republican government."

There exists a strange coincidence which reveals the purpose of these charges. We are told that the supposed crimes took place on May 21, 1948, yet they are reported on August 18, 1948. That is, a month and three days before the U. N. Assembly met in Paris and when it was thought that the Spanish question would be discussed. The Daily Worker, with similar purposes, published the same story under the headline "Franco Burns 22 Miners Alive," dated Madrid, April 3, 1949. This is also on the eve of a U. N. meeting in New York. I suppose Mr. Thomas will not be too amused to find his story credited by the Daily Worker to a news agency which does not exist in Spain.

In any case, on reading the versions published by the sheets, we find that there were no witnesses of this "event." But if it is alleged that the identity of the witnesses cannot be revealed because of danger to their persons, the publicity given to the names of the "victims" would appear to contradict this.

The charge of condemning persons to death for simple reasons of anarchist activities is false because it is a generalization. The fact that Marcos Nadal, whose case was used to confirm this assertion, had been reprieved, because grounds for clemency were discovered, proves exactly the contrary.

Mr. Thomas has three choices: Give proof, go to Spain and carry out his own investigation on the spot, or retract.

MANUEL MAESTRO,
Press Attache, Spanish Embassy.
Washington.

Legalized Gambling

Your March 30 editorial, "Seeds of Crime," gave a good outline of one phase of the gambling situation but carefully refrained from giving a complete picture. Gambling is admittedly an almost universal human trait that will get satisfied in one way or another. Making gambling illegal by Government authority does not change human traits; it simply means that they will be satisfied by illegal means.

It is to be expected that persons engaged in other rackets should be operating this profitable one also. This is the only connection between gambling and the other rackets.

If one considers the flourishing state of the rackets during prohibition, one must be singularly dense not to see the parallel between liquor and gambling. The public was apathetic or downright hostile to prohibition because it went counter to the principles or practices of a majority of the people. The same applies to present gambling laws and for the same reason.

If there is indeed a 100 million dollar gambling racket in this area the District could easily avoid the sales tax by legalizing and operating the business itself.

Matter of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The New Isolationism

THIS SOMEWHAT befuddled Capital has just been treated to an unusually puzzling spectacle. First the Administration's Senate leaders strained every nerve to pass an intact Eurppean Recovery Program. Then the Atlantic Pact was proudly signed. And then the President's chief economic adviser, Dr. Edwin Nourse, suggested that the Atlantic Pact obligation to rearm western Europe should be paid for by cutting our own defense and the European recovery programs. He added blandly that his speech had been approved by the President.

When the Administration gives invaluable aid and comfort to the congressional isolationists, an explanation is in order. Superficially, of course, the explanation is very simple. The President has allowed what was done to him twice by Henry Wallace, to be done a third time.

Not long ago, Dr. Nourse returned from a tour of the country much impressed by the business groups' natural dislike for taxation. He apparently concluded that it was better to torpedo our foreign policy, than to raise taxes to pay for lend-lease to Europe. He outlined these views to the President. Since the President's budget message specifically proposed raising taxes in order to meet the Atlantic Pact obligation, one must conclude the President did not understand Dr. Nourse, as one must also suppose he failed to understand Wallace on the celebrated previous occasions.

AT ANY RATE, Truman authorized Nourse to express his views in a speech to a War Department orientation conference, merely requiring that he clear the speech in advance with Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder and Budget Director Frank Pace. Snyder heartily approved the Nourse argument.

Pace, seeing the contradiction of the President's budget message, protested the speech. But Pace was somehow eluded. And the State Department was evidently not consulted at all, although it is reported that the President also asked Nourse to show his speech to Undersecretary of State James Webb.

Nourse's speech evoked an immediate response from Capitol Hill, as any infant of 3 could have foreseen it would. Nothing could have been more pleasing to the Senators and Representatives who are determined to cripple American foreign policy, if need be, in order to avoid a tax rise.

Their own arguments had been echoed by the President's official economic augur. They rushed up onto the roof, cheering loudly. The President then lamely disavowed Nourse, which did nothing to counteract the disastrous damage already don in the delicate congressional situation.

GENERAL INEPTITUDE sticks out of the whole episode like a sore thumb, as it stuck out of the all-too-similar Wallace episodes. But for this episode, as for those, there is a deeper explanation also. This explanation is foreshadowed in Secretary Snyder's Army Day speech in Boston, which dimly, very cautiously, but quite noticeably hinted at exactly the same points made by Dr. Nourse.

The truth is that there is a new isolationism abroad in the Administration. Prior to the election, Secretaries Marshall and Forrestal and Undersecretary Lovett ruled supreme in the foreign and defense fields. Some of those around the President often sabotaged the President's policies but the policies that were sabotaged were on the domestic front. Now these men have gained self-confidence and are venturing into the foreign and defense field, not without some encouragement from the President himself.

The first sign of this rather astounding phenomenon was the sharp reduction in the tempo of our own rearmament, ordered by the President this fall. The original impulse for this move came from Secretary Snyder, Dr. Nourse and the then Budget Director James Webb (who is likely to form different ideas at the State Department). There have been other signs also of this encroachment, such as Snyder's appointment as a permanent member of the National Security Council, and the odd retention in office of Snyder's ally, Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer, who very nearly sees eye to eye with Senator Wherry.

THERE ARE probably two sources of this new isolationism. First, the independent position and strong characters of the old managers of foreign and defense policy were no doubt resented by the men around the President, if not by the President himself. The old foreign and defense policy-makers were accused of "crisis mongering," and of being under the influence of "the brass." What they did was resented, as were the men themselves.

Second, most of the men around the President are fundamentally intensely conservative, deeply anxious not to rock the boat and quite ignorant of the world situation. Thus they were and are devoted to business-as-usual, bitterly opposed to higher taxes, and in general in favor of sacrificing the future to the present. With the Nourse speech, this cat has at least peeped out of the bag. It can prove to be a very dangerous animal.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Pact Before U. N.

THE Atlantic Pact will have to be explained to the General Assembly of the United Nations and the sooner we say that we shall argue our case in a full and open debate, the better. Certainly we should not wait to be challenged by Mr. Gromyko and then, having been called to account, present our case in the form of a mere rebuttal. All the United Nations, not only the Soviet Union and its allies, have a right to an accounting, and it is our duty to them and to ourselves to make that accounting. The burden of proof is clearly upon us, and any appearance of evading our obligation to explain, or of quibbling about texts, can only undermine popular confidence both in the pact and in the charter.

LIPPMANN

But while notice should be given at once that we intend to explain, the actual presentation should not be made until our case has been thoroughly prepared. Judging by the documents that have been published by the Department of State, our case is not yet ready for argument. That is not because the case itself is not a very good one, but because the ground on which the department has thus far chosen to argue it is soft and slippery.

THE weakness of the department's argument is that it attempts to treat the pact as something which the authors of the charter foresaw and authorized when the United Nations was organized. That is just not so, and the attempt to demonstrate it by a strained construction of Articles 51 and 52 will not carry conviction. The formation of this bloc, like the formation of the Soviet bloc which preceded it, is an event which the founders of the organization did not authorize. Indeed they rejected the idea on principle when it was proposed that they should recognize these developments as inevitable.

The true ground on which to argue the case is not, therefore, that the pact is derived from the charter, but that the formation of these blocs is an historic development, unforeseen and undesired in 1945, to which the United Nations is now compelled to adjust itself. The U. N., in other words, like all other living organisms, is subject to change. It will not perish because it evolves. It will perish if it does not.

THE relation of the blocs to the charter is somewhat like that of political parties to our own Constitution. Parties are not recognized in the Constitution; in fact the Founding Fathers felt strongly, as George Washington put it, about "the danger of parties in the state." Secretary Hull and his expert advisers who dominated the drafting of the charter felt the same way about blocs. There "will no longer be need," said Secretary Hull (March 21, 1944), "for spheres of influence, for alliances, for balance of power, or any other of the special arrangements, through which, in the unhappy past, the nations strove to safeguard their security or to promote their interests."

But though the Founding Fathers deplored the existence of parties, very soon they found themselves forming parties. So with the United Nations.

The "special arrangements"—that is to say the grouping of nations in blocs—which Mr. Hull and his contemporaries deplored, have been made by their immediate successors. The Atlantic bloc is not the first to have been formed within the United Nations. The Soviet bloc came first. There are also other blocs. There is an Arab bloc. There is something that can fairly be described as a Latin-American bloc. There is manifestly in the making some kind of South Asian bloc.

IT IS a waste of time to deplore these blocs, and to inveigh against them. These blocs, and not the 50-odd separate, sovereign, and theoretically equal states, are the actual members of the United Nations. That is not what the charter says. That is not what its original authors meant. But that is what the organization has become—what in the view of some of us it was always bound to become.

For a world organization designed to operate by the collective action of more than 50 separate states as different in size, power, and internal structure as the Soviet Union and Yemen, the United States and Bulgaria, China and Sweden, is an abstraction and a fiction. It never could hope to deal with the real conflicts of mankind. They can be dealt with only by the great historic communities of nations that have developed through vital necessity and by common tradition over long periods of time. The function of a world organization is to promote agreement among these communities. It can perform that function only if it recognizes that they exist, not by wringing its hands and wishing that they did not exist.

AS A matter of fact a negotiated settlement with the Soviet Union is more feasible now that the North Atlantic military powers are united, and can, as regards the fundamental military settlement with Russia, negotiate for the whole Atlantic Community.

The crucial issue on which a settlement depends is whether honorable and acceptable terms can be found for the evacuation of Central and Eastern Europe by the Soviet armies. That is the issue which remains unsettled from the Second World War and must be settled if there is not to be a third. When the Russian armies, now in the middle of Europe, go home, the Second World War will have been concluded and the Third will have been averted.

This, we may note, is what Mr. Churchill in his Boston speech described as a settlement, using language, however, that was more picturesque and mischievous than he would have used were he still the Prime Minister: "the Mongol armies trooped back on their ponies . . . They never returned till now."

THE North Atlantic Pact makes it more possible to settle that issue, not only because in unity there is strength for bargaining as well as for war but for another and no less important reason. The Western nations have been afraid of a German settlement which would have meant the withdrawal of the Russian army but also of the American. They were disunited. They feared the resurgence of Germany or the capture of Germany by the Communists. They have less reason now to fear a settlement. There are, to be sure, risks in any settlement. But the risks will be greatly reduced as the Western nations become more united.

For all Europe knows, now that the pact is signed, that American military power will not again be withdrawn across the Atlantic but will remain wherever it is needed for the protection of the Atlantic Community.

average yield of 120 bushels to the acre. Today many potato raisers who were in that class 15 years ago, get as high as 300 to 400 bushels to the acre.

If the price of potatoes was supported on a basis of the relationship potato prices had to other prices 15 years ago, the same potato farmer would have vastly greater real income per acre today than he had a decade and a half ago.

In fact, at 60 per cent of parity, which prevails for potatoes this year, he still is getting a disproportionate income.

His formula, Brannan decided, "should reflect the advancement in agricultural knowledge, facilities and skills." Here, in summary, is what he recommended:

1. That farm incomes be supported at a level that would allow a farmer to buy with his farm products just as much goods and services as he did on the average during the previous 10 years.

2. That the formula take as a starting base the average annual purchasing power of all farm cash receipts for the years 1939 to 1948, or the first 10 of the last 12 years. This purchasing power is determined by dividing cash receipts for each year by the same year's index of prices paid by farmers for goods and services. In terms of average 1939-48 purchasing-power dollars, this base is 18,218 million dollars.

3. To calculate the income support standard, this base is multiplied by the current parity index, which, on March 15, was 144. The result would be an income support standard of 26,234 million dollars for 1950.

4. The next step after determining this aggregate income standard, is to determine a corresponding schedule of commodity prices. First, the ratio of the current income support standard to the actual average level of cash receipts for the 10 immediately preceding years would be determined. Then the average farm prices for each commodity for the previous 10 years would be multiplied by that ratio.

"For example, the average cash receipts for the 10 years 1940-49 is 20,980 million dollars," Brannan explained, "while the estimated minimum income standard for 1950 is 26,234 million.

"Since the support standard is 1.25 times the average cash receipts, the support price schedule would be determined by simply multiplying the 1940-49 average farm price for each of the several commodities by 1.25.

Comparison Presented

Brannan presented a comparison of how his formula would work out with the present parity price support formula, and the price support formula which becomes effective next year. Here is that comparison:

Brannan emphasized that the "factor which has discouraged real use of the parity income definition in the past has been the gap between farm and nonfarm income." He sees in his program a move toward closing that gap which, he said, puts the average farmer's income at less than 60 per cent of his urban brother's.

F. D. Roosevelt, jr., Gets Backing for Congress

New York, April 10 (U.P.).—Frank C. Walker, former Postmaster General, today indorsed the candidacy of Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., for the congressional seat left vacant by the death of Representative Sol Bloom.

A special election will be held May 17 in the Twentieth Congressional District on Manhattan's West Side, which has been represented in Congress by a Democrat since 1924.

Clendenin Ryan to Start Paper In New York Within a Month

New York, April 10 (AP).—Clendennin J. Ryan, millionaire foe of Mayor William O'Dwyer, said today he is going to start a newspaper to battle "sinister forces eating at the heart of American life."

Ryan, founder and president of the Government Affairs Club, said the newspaper, a weekly, will be called The Public Guardian. It will "cover generally the national and international fields as well as the present campaign in New York City," he said.

The paper will begin publication in about a month, Ryan said.

Ryan said its editor will be Joseph Lilly, former president of the New York City Tax Commission and public information director for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. Managing editor will be Sutherland Denlinger, who was with the office of War Information in World War II and director of UNRRA public information for Czechoslovakia.

He is a central figure in the current grand jury investigation of an alleged plot to tap telephones of some 75 high municipal figures, including O'Dwyer. Police say private investigators were hired by Ryan's attorney, John G. Broady, to listen in on the officials' telephone calls.

Ryan has denied any connection with wire tapping.

Brannan Calls His Farm Plan Cheaper, but Senators Differ

By The Associated Press

Senators differed sharply today over costs of the Administration's proposed new farm program with one opponent saying the estimates run from $5,000,000,000 to $15,000,000,000.

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan asserted it would cost less than the present program, or other suggested programs.

Brannan's views conflicted sharply with the criticisms of Senator Aiken (R., Vt.), author of the long-range farm law passed by the GOP-controlled 80th Congress and due to go into effect in 1950.

The Vermont Senator said he figures the cost of the Administration program will run from $5,000,000,000 to $6,000,000,000 a year. He said some agricultural experts figure it will be from $8,000,000,000 to $15,000,000,000.

Brannan observed in a radio interview with Ed Hart (station WWDC):

"I say one thing for certain. The cost of handling potatoes won't be any $400,000,000, as it has been for the past three years."

Brannan referred to the expense of buying surplus potatoes to support the price as the law now requires.

He also observed that his proposal won't call for any more power over the farmer than the existing laws allow. Aiken has contended the new proposal provides far more control "than we have ever had."

Brannan also said there would be no change affecting the middleman—the processor or the handler.

"We are in a transition period of our economy where we won't be able to find markets for all of our tremendous farm production," the Secretary said. "I am for abundant production but I want to make realistic use of it."

Senator McGrath (D., R.I.), chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said in a statement that "there is no evidence" the new plan will cost more than the present system.

McGrath further said the new program "will mean cheaper food prices for consumers" and "is only a step toward closing the gap between farmers' income and the income of the rest of the nation."

Chairman Thomas (D., Okla.) of the Senate Agriculture Committee and Senator Anderson (D., N. M.) called for additional information about the Brannan proposals. But said they have not yet made up their minds about the program.

Bacteria Research Refutes Red Theory

New York, April 10 (U.P.). — A study of life in a bacteria colony showed tonight that environment plays no significant part in heredity.

The finding, reported by Columbia University scientists, is expected to have an important bearing on the opposing theories of genetics throughout the world.

At the present time, American and British scientists on the one hand and Russian scientists on the other are in controversy on what controls heredity.

The Russians led by T. D. Lysenko, have abandoned the generally accepted theories that there is a gene for every human characteristic.

Under the new Soviet scientific line, they now believe that the type of human individual can be controlled entirely by environment.

The Soviet theory was shown to be incorrect in the experiments conducted at Columbia. The scientists used selected micro-organisms in the experiments because of the ability of the bacteria to produce a generation in 20 minutes.

The Columbia report said: "The ability of micro-organisms to adapt themselves to different external conditions is not the result of a change induced by the environment, but rather the environment acts by allowing the selected growth of only a few members in the population of the micro-organisms."

They believe the same principle applies to human beings, plants, and all animals.

The Columbia scientists first proved that bacteria, even though they required a certain substance, such as an amino acid, for growth, can be "trained" to synthesize the substance and to grow in the absence of an external supply.

Sees 'Police State'

Archbishop Against Child Care by U. S.

Boston, April 10 (AP).—The Most Rev. Richard J. Cushing, Catholic Archbishop of Boston, today called a proposed Government child welfare program "a dangerous step toward the "slave state.' "

The prelate spoke at the Communion breakfast of a Catholic women's organization.

He apparently referred to a section of the Administration bill to broaden Social Security coverage, pending in Congress. He said the program would set up a public child care program in States and local communities with funds from the Federal government.

"The national directors of Catholic charities" Archbishop Cushing said, "are gravely concerned about the proposal.

"Dangerous Step"

". . . turning over of orphaned and needy children to the Government would mean the elimination of 60 to 75 per cent of our Catholic child-caring work in the United States. It would lead to further local programs . . . which would speedily lead to the death of free, religious action and the growth of secularist, controlled action.

"It would be an important and a dangerous step toward the 'slave state' we deplore so much abroad and fear so much at home.

"Regimentation of any kind leads to the destruction of every kind of freedom. Catholics owe it to America to pray, plan and to work hard for the preservation of private charities and the prevention of the servile state."

Opposes Health Insurance

He also opposed pending legislation calling for establishment of Federal public health insurance. He termed the proposal "socialized medicine."

The Government now has a $1,000,000,000 a year program for helping the needy.

The Administration has asked Congress to expand that by another $200,000,000 to $250,000,000. Expansion of care for needy children would be part of the program.

Nationalistic Artists Given Stalin Awards

Moscow, April 10 (NYHT).—Writers and artists who described the advance of Soviet culture and its superiority over the bourgeois West were rewarded in the second group of 1949 Stalin Prize announced today.

One hundred eleven prizes worth 6,475,000 rubles were awarded today to 247 persons in arts and letters.

With yesterday's awards in the field of science this brings the total of 1949 Stalin Prizes to 302 worth 21,725,000 rubles, awarded to 1045 persons. (The ruble has an official exchange value of 5.3 to the dollar).

Today's winners included novelists, poets, playwrights and motion picture producers who pictured the patriotic Soviet man as advancing toward communism and described the capitalist West as degenerating; composers who are writing realistic and patriotic music as compared with the "formalistic" music of the West which has been rejected by the Communist Party; artists who painted portraits of Prime Minister Stalin, First Deputy Premier Viacheslav M. Molotov and victorious battle scenes, and architects who designed eight buildings for Moscow of from 16 to 32 stories.

European Flights Show 37% Increase

The Scandinavian Airlines yesterday announced a 37 per cent increase in the number of passengers making flights to Europe during the winter months following an approximate 25 per cent reduction in fares for this period.

The reduction in fare applied to round trip tickets good for one month's stay abroad. Airline officials said they were considering a further fare reduction and extending the valid period of stay by next winter.

His wife said after the marriage, "I love the Governor and he loves me. We thought this over and decided it was the thing to do.

"In the face of it, it might seem foolish and subject to much misinterpretation. But the Governor may not have too many more days and it has made him beautifully happy."

Mrs. Osborn, the former Stella Lee Brunt of Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, met Osborn in 1925, when she was 31. He adopted her in 1937 and she changed her name to Stellanova Osborn.

In recent years, she has been his biographer and constant companion. Together, they have written several books.

Osborn has been a semi-invalid for several years, after breaking his hip in a fall. Until an operation was performed a year ago, his sight had failed also. Since then he has been able to see again from one eye.

Osborn was governor of Michigan from 1911 to 1913. He has been a political reformer, newspaper publisher, ore prospector and lumberjack.

Farley Demands U. S. Reestablish Spain Relations

Glens Falls, N. Y., April 10 (U.P.). Former Postmaster General James A. Farley called upon the United States today to reestablish diplomatic relationships with Franco Spain and urged that Spain be admitted into "any western European union established."

"I think it is imperative for security reasons that we resume diplomatic relations with Spain, including the appointment of an ambassador to Madrid," Farley said.

"Spain should be admitted to any western European union established, and should receive from us the extension of credits for agricultural and industrial rehabilitation."

Speaking at a Knights of Columbus communion breakfast here, Farley said:

"The Spanish war is 12 years behind us, yet I shudder to think what the situation in Europe would be today had the Communists gotten control of that nation. The Pyrenees Mountains would be a Communist fortress looking down the throat of Europe. Gibraltar would be an incipient Communist machinegun looking down the throat of the Mediterranean."

Berle's Television Show Nets Million

New York, April 10 (U.P.).—Milton Berle's 16-hour marathon television broadcast for the Damon Runyon Memorial Fund received pledges of more than $1,100,000 for cancer research, the National Broadcasting Co. said today.

Berle went on the air at noon (EST) yesterday and signed off at 4 a. m. today, the longest one-man television show in history. The program was seen in 12 cities from Boston to St. Louis.

(In Washington, WNBW said its viewers had pledged $16,546.99 in 1577 calls received by the station.)

Berle sat before a battery of nine telephones here, answering phone call pledges, auctioning off merchandise, clowning and talking with hundreds of entertainers who wandered in. At 2 a. m., the comedian announced he would stay on the air until he reached the million-dollar mark. He hit that goal at 3:45 a. m. and went off the air 15 minutes later.

The largest pledge was by Samuel Pincus, a Philadelphia cancer victim, who promised $150,000.

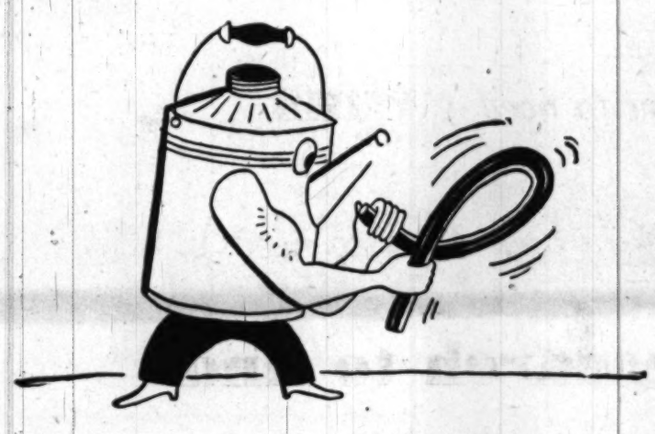
What does comfort cost per pound?

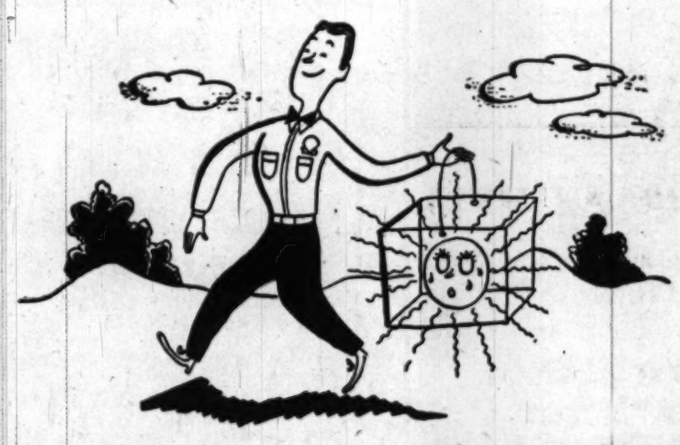
Here's a new way to look at any Shell product

Growing uses for petroleum—now our largest source of "portable power"—help raise our standard of living to highest point in history...



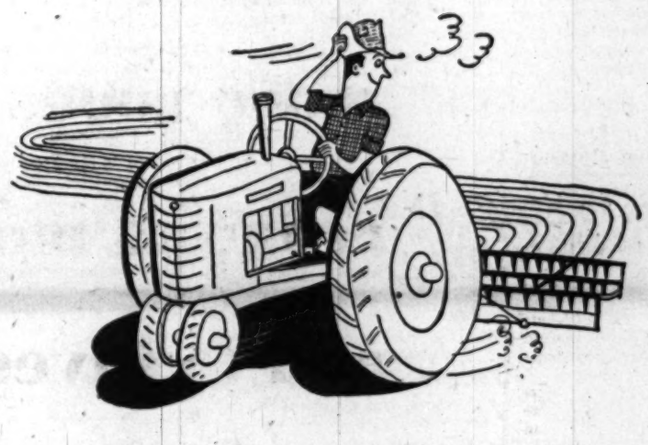
Strong man for sale:

An ancient dream of "easy living" was to own Aladdin's lamp, and "wish" the hard work done. Now the dream comes true. Petroleum and natural gas furnish 48% of our energy requirements. Petroleum is easy to buy at reasonable prices, anywhere in America. And it's ready to tackle almost any job you ask.



Take home some sun:

Let's look at a gallon of Shell fuel oil, for instance, in a new way. It costs you about half as much as a pack of cigarettes—but you're actually buying something more than a product. Your gallon of fuel oil is really "7 pounds" of portable summer weather—to warm your home . . . protect your family from the winter cold.



Faster farmwork:

Give a farmer a gallon of Shell diesel fuel, which will weigh about 7 pounds, and you're giving him tireless mechanical muscles. You're helping him cultivate a lot more land in a lot less time. You're giving him an easier life. And incidentally, you're helping him give a lot more food to a very hungry world.

For 2 ice cream cones:

A gallon of Shell gasoline costs—without taxes—about the same as 2 large ice cream cones. It contains the energy to transport you and your family 15 to 20 miles . . . on business, errands, or recreation. Petroleum is portable power, available—for your comfort and convenience—anywhere in America.

Shell Oil Company, Incorporated

SHELL

A forward-looking company serves all 4:
1. The Consumer—through fair prices, good service, and the development of new and better products.
2. The Community—through actions that promote local and national welfare in peace or war.
3. Its Employees—through job security, fair wages, and the opportunity to advance.
4. Its Shareholders—through a fair return on their investment.

One on the Aisle—

How Does a Judge Decide Tourney?

By Richard L. Coe

JUDGING THE ONE-ACT Play Tournament Saturday was not easy.

After it was announced that the Arts Club production of Lawrence Lagner's dated farce "Another Way Out," won first place, to what seemed the evident approval of the Roosevelt Auditorium audience, several people asked how we arrived at our choice.

I do not presume to speak for my colleagues, Jay Carmody of the Evening Star and Leo Sullivan of the Times-Herald, but here's the way the evening struck me.

I voted for the winner because it seemed to me that the Arts Club had made the most of its material. It had chosen a play considerably easier, yes, than the runner-up, the Alexandria Little Theater's "Hello Out There," by William Saroyan, but it had evidently taken its own potentialities into full account.

One could hear every line, the stage was set and lighted to take in the altogether too-large auditorium. The players were at ease and projected nicely. Dorothy Winchole, in th esmall role of a maid gave a particularly able performance, Herman Riess had a neat touch as a baffled book salesman, Justine Jones rated an honorable mention for the Maud Howell Smith award for the best performance in the preliminary series of 20 playlets and Mary Johnston and Walter Studdiford were farcically capable in the leads. There was a relaxed smoothness that caught immediately with the audience and the total effect seemed the most successful of the evening.

Carmi's Fine Performing

For his work as the lead in the Saroyan play, the Alexandria Little Theater's Paul Carmi well deserved to be named by the preliminary judges as winner of Mrs. Smith's annual award. He was thoroughly effective, certainly the evening's best performer, from start to finish — and it's a long part. However, the lighting of the playlet was totally inadequate, which I assume accounted for some directorial vagaries. Though I was in the third row, I couldn't hear a line of the important off-stage conversation, nor some of the onstage dialogue of others than Mr. Carmi. It was an interesting play choice, but its effectiveness was certainly lost on me. However, I was voting not for Langner over Saroyan, but for one group's work over another.

It was regrettable that we couldn't give some award to the Mount Vernon Players, who had the wit to try a manuscript play and one I'd say, with real possibilities. This was John Connor's "For the Ladies or the Afternoon of a Pawn." It's a take-off of female worship of a radio personality and with some blue-penciling might become an amusing little farce. But Miss Connor's direction was not up to her idea, nor were her players ideal.

The Montgomery Players chose a tour de force by Charles George, "When Shakespeare's Ladies Meet," wherein five of the Bard's heroines attempt to influence Juliet's ill-starred romance with Romeo. Chosen by lot to warm up the audience, the Montgomery group just wasn't equal to the task and in voice and motion lacked the grace inherent in the lines. As Ophelia, Clare Hill was runner-up for the Smith medal.

Salute to Mrs. Smith

So, there's the record for the twenty-first annual run-off of this city-wide contest sponsored by the D. C. Recreation Department, under the untiring direction of Miss Sibyl Baker. Robert E. Colvin was chairman of this year's executive committee and Capt. Gerald Cameron, Michel Meyers and Mrs. May Redmond Smith served as judges for the preliminaries. Nor would a list of the credits be complete without mention of Mrs. Mabelle M. Clark's impressive listing of Washington's 34 acting groups, which contributed the 16 entries and a salute to Mrs. Maude Howell Smith, whose charming faithfulness to this yearly event has carved for her a unique niche in the scattered world of Washington's playmakers. The finals would't have been right if Mrs. Smith hadn't returned from California to show how the voice of a tiny, sprightly lady can fill a hall that is hardly suitable for any but seasonal players.

The awards will be officially presented at the Tournament Dinner and Frolic, Monday evening, May 2 at Barker Hall of the YWCA.

2 Unions to Strike D. C. Papers

Typographical Union and the Photoengravers.

Evans was advised that the two striking unions planned to throw picket lines around the plants of the four publishers starting at 8 a. m.

Representatives of two other newspaper unions, the Typographical Union covering printers, and the Newspaper Guild covering editorial workers, advised their members to report to work today in accordance with existing agreements.

Both pressmen's and stereotypers' agreements with the publishers contained provisions to (1) continue terms in effect during continuance of negotiations, and (2) allow for the breaking off of negotiations on formal notice.

The pressmen gave their notice of breaking off of negotiations on Saturday afternoon. The stereotypers first notified the publishers of their decision to break off negotiations when they announced the strike decision last night.

Conciliators Stand By

It was understood that representatives of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service have been in touch with the parties to the disputes and were standing by at a late hour last night in hopes of finding a formula to break the deadlock.

Pressmen operate the giant rotary presses in the final stages of newspaper production. The stereotypers make the cylindrical casts of metal, which are placed on the presses.

Contract Ended February 7

The pressmen's contract expired February 7.

The pressmen demanded a higher wage increase and other contract improvements, including a reduction in the work week and three weeks vacation after one year's service.

Under the old contract, pressmen received $79.10 for day work and $82.85 for night work in a 37½-hour week.

The union said in a formal statement last week that it was insisting on a contract which would bring Washington pressmen's wages up to the level of those in "20 major cities of comparable size."

Since Wednesday's stoppage, officials of the international union took a hand in negotiations with the Publishers' Association. The two sides met twice Thursday, three times Friday and once Saturday, when the union representatives formally broke off the talks.

Last formal meeting between the stereotypers and the publishers took place on Wednesday during a wildcat strike of Washington pressmen which forced the four newspaper to suspend publication for one day.

Contract Ended Last Year

The stereotypers' contract with the publishers ran out December 1. As of Wednesday, it was reported, most points for a new contract had been agreed upon except for wages.

The stereotypers then indicated a willingness to settle for $9 weekly increases.

Earlier demands of the stereotypers were said by the publishers to have included:

A day shift scale of $100 for a 37½-hour week, including one half hour for lunch daily, as compared to the present scale of $78.60 for a 40-hour week.

A night shift pay scale of $105 for a 35-hour week, including one hour for lunch, as compared with the present $80 for a 32½-hour week.

General three-week vacations, beginning in 1949.

Ernest confirmed the strike action just before 7 p. m. at the end of a conference of union leaders which followed the general membership meetings.

The special meetings of the two locals were held on different floors of the Pythian Temple, but the stereotypers joined the pressmen for about half an hour.

Bursts of applause and voices of speakers could be heard at intervals through the closed doors of the pressmen's meeting room on the ground floor. Then came a loud chorus of "Aye" followed by silence.

A small group of stereotypers emerged from the elevator shortly afterward and walked into the pressmen's meeting. After they returned, there was another "Aye" vote and two delegates from the pressmen went upstairs.

Applause Is Heard

Some time later, the stereotypers came down in a body and remained in the pressmen's meeting. There were cheers and applause, and after about half an hour, the stereotypers took the elevators to their hall again.

There were more cheers from the pressmen. Then reporters rushed in to question the officers and buttonhole members. In about 10 minutes, the stereotypers meeting broke up.

Major radio stations announced increased news schedules for the strike's duration.

Radio Station WTOP said it will air condensations of features from The Washington Post and other Washington papers, including columnists and comics.

In addition to the regularly scheduled news broadcasts, WTOP will air news every 15 minutes from 5:30 a. m. until 7:45 a. m.

Post readers will find their comics on Claude Mahoney's "Once Over Lightly" at 7:40 a. m. Other Post features will be included on Bill Gold's "This Is Washington" at 10 a. m.

WRC and WMAL will air news at frequent intervals. WOL plans increased coverage of local events by more special event broadcasts. WWDC will air bulletins "as the news breaks," a station official said. Special shoppers' programs will be aired through the day.

WEAM, in Arlington, will broadcast news on the hour and half hour from the city room of the Times-Herald.

STATEMENT—From P. 1

Publishers' Statement

out of concern for the welfare of the other employes of their newspapers, no effort should be spared to avert a threatened suspension of publication of daily newspapers in the Nation's Capital.

Accordingly, the Publishers have repeatedly offered, and are still willing, to submit these disputes to arbitration.

In view of the long history of the espousement by the International Printing Pressmen's Union of the principle of arbitration as the best means of settling disputes, it is particularly difficult to understand the rejection of this principle by the Pressmen's Union in this instance.

The Publishers regret that a small group of their employes has seen fit to resort to strike action rather than orderly methods of adjudicating their differences.

The Publishers regret that this action threatens interruption of the employment of more than 5000 persons in this city.

And the Publishers regret that these unions have undertaken to try to deprive the Nation's Capital of its daily newspapers.

Seymour to Retire As Yale President

Postlude

Bach Work Is Presented Memorably

By Richard Keith

Yesterday afternoon and evening, the Cathedral Choral Society, Paul Callaway conducting, presented a memorable performance of the complete St. Matthew Passion by Bach.

Callaway brought to yesterday's concert a dignity and perfection seldom achieved. Of course there were a few moments here and there where minor mishaps occurred but the excellent musicianship of conductor, soloists, chorus and orchestra prevented their becoming noticeable.

Work Presented Uncut

The original orchestration was followed exactly and there were no cuts at all. The use of now obsolete instruments brought about a perfection of balance between orchestra and soloists which was well worth the extra effort of securing them. By performing all arias in complete rather than truncated form, Callaway restored their true symmetry.

The tempi throughout were moving but unhurried and the liberties taken were few and in good taste. The boys of the Cathedral Choir were used for the many special soprano effects in the score. The peculiar quality of the boys' voices allowed their part to contrast clearly with the general chorus tone.

Barbara Troxell, soprano, Louise Bernhardt, contralto, John Garris, tenor, and Paul Matthen and Jule Zabawa, baritones, were the soloists. Miss Troxell and Mr. Garris gave exceptional performances. Miss Troxell's voice, though not sufficiently dramatic for the "Bleed and Break" aria, was perfectly suited to the poignant "In Love My Saviour." Mr. Garris' interpretation of the taxing role of the Evangelist was highly dramatic and carefully planned. In remarkably few places did he have trouble with the baroque figurations which require an almost endless wind supply.

Baritones Show Good Taste

The two baritones sang their parts efficiently and with good taste and feeling. Miss Bernhardt has a warm rich voice which she displayed well in "Grief and Pain." She seemed to be somewhat confused about her rhythm, however, and her singing of "Unhappy Golgotha" was pretty unhappy.

All in all, it was probably one of the best performances this much performed work ever received. From the first bitter chorus to last restful one, one felt the awesomeness of this great work. It is Bach's greatest masterpiece and yesterday, it received a masterful reading. Let us pray that the choral standards of the Cathedral Choral Society will begin to spread to other groups of this sort throughout the Nation.

P-TA Unit Meets Tuesday

The Montgomery Hills (Md.) Junior High School P-TA will meet Tuesday at 8 p. m. at the school. The school glee club will sing Easter music and the Dramatic Club will present "The Club Woman," and "The Lamp Went Out."

New Haven, Conn., April 10 (U.P.).—Dr. Charles Seymour, Yale University's fifteenth president, said today he will retire on July 1, 1950.

Seymour

President Seymour, who succeeded Dr. James Rowland Angell in June, 1937, said he wanted to give the Yale Corp. "ample opportunity for studied consideration in the choice of my successor."

He will reach the retirement age of 65 in January.

"It is with the conviction that fresh leadership of the most vigorous sort will best serve Yale's interest that I avail myself of the privilege of retirement," he said.

The Yale Corp. received the announcement "with profound regret, since it brings to a close a term of great service to Yale during the years of war and the adjustment of peace. It rejoices to know, however, that though he will relinquish the exacting duties of the presidency, the university will still be able to avail itself of the benefits of his counsel."

Scout Pack Plans Tour

Members of Cub Scout Pack 211, of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area, will visit the Chester (Pa.) plants of the Scott Paper Co. and the Ford Motor Co. Thursday.

Work to Begin Next Week On Super-Carrier

By the United Press

Construction of the Navy's controversial 65,000-ton super aircraft carrier, the USS United States, will begin next week, Navy authorities asserted yesterday.

Contrary to published reports, they do not expect current top-level military discussions at Key West, Fla., to affect plans for the vessel. Its keel is scheduled to be laid on April 18 by the Newport News (Va.) Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co.

Vice Admiral Arthur W. Radford, vice chief of naval operations, answered speculation about delays or a cancellation of the project with a flat statement that "I'm certain it will be built." He knew of "no doubt" on that point.

The date of the keel-laying ceremoney was given by Rear Admiral Charles L. Brand, assistant chief of the Navy Bureau of Ships.

Cost of building the carrier is now estimated at 189 million dollars, a 52 per cent increase in the 124-million-dollar estimate announced last October.

First Sunday Movies, Bowling Draw Crowds in Zion, Ill.

Zion, Ill., April 10 (U.P.).—Residents of Zion today saw their first Sunday movie in history with abolition of the town's strict Blue Laws.

More than 400 citizens jammed into Zion's only movie house to see a picture called "You Gotta Stay Happy."

A few doors down the street the eight alleys of the Zion Bowling Lanes were packed.

Last Tuesday, by a vote of 1579 to 1564, Zion voted to allow the movie house and bowling alley to stay open on Sunday.

That was something that hadn't been allowed since John A. Dowie founded the town in 1901 as the home of his Christian Catholic Apostolic Church.

At one time no smoking, dancing, doctors, short shirts or pork were allowed in Zion.

Another church leader, Wilbur Glenn Voliva, brought some fame to the town by holding that the world was flat. After Voliva died in 1942 the Blue Laws began to go one by one.

Silver Spring Optimists Install Officers Tuesday

New officers of the Silver Spring (Md.) Optimist Club will be installed at a Charter Night dinner dance Tuesday at Stone House Inn, Four Corners, Md.

They are: Edward Baker, president; Ralph Lutz, vice president; Fred Kirby, secretary; Carroll Gilliam, treasurer, and John Emory, sergeant at arms. Directors are Harold Pierce and Dr. Stanley Heller, two-year terms, and Jack Anderson, one year. William J. McCorkindale, jr., of Roanoke, Va., governor of the Sixteenth District of Optimist International, will install the new officers.

Dental Society To Hold Clinical Demonstrations

A series of clinical demonstrations will highlight the monthly meeting of the District of Columbia Dental Society, starting at 4 p. m. Tuesday at the Army Medical Center.

A buffet supper will be served in the Officers' Club at 6:30 p. m., with music by the 304th Army Band.

Brig. Gen. Paul H. Streit, Commanding General of the Army Medical Center, will open the evening session at 8:15 p. m. in Sternberg auditorium. A scientific presentation will be given by Maj. George H. Moulton, D. C., of Walter Reed General Hospital.

A discussion group to follow the presentation will include Dr. Charles B. Murton of the Georgetown University dental school; Lieut. Kenneth R. Pfeiffer, D. C., USN, Navy Medical Center, and Dr. Walter E. Omundson, Walter Reed Hospital.

Democrats Blame GOP for Congress

By David McConnell
NYHT News Service

Faced with almost certain setbacks on a goodly part of President Truman's program, there was every indication yesterday that the Democratic leadership plans to start an intensive campaign now of blaming the congressional "slowdown" on Republicans and recalcitrant Democrats up for reelection in 1950.

The first indication that the Democrats were planning an early kickoff for the important 1950 campaign came Friday from President Truman in a talk to the executive committee which handles the fund-raising Jefferson-Jackson Day dinners. The President told the group that the Democrats would advise the people what had been done and "what we hope to do and what we wil do when we elect the Congress in 1950."

The strategy was elaborated on today by Senator McGrath of Rhode Island, Democratic National Committee chairman, who asserted that "the people know that the Democrats are on the side of action and the Republicans seem to be on the side of inaction." While McGrath said the Eighty-first Congress is "in its infancy" he warned that "it will be judged in the end on who was responsible for its achievements and who was responsible for its failure."

McGrath indicated that the first phase of the Administration campaign will be to "fix the blame" in the minds of the people on the Republicans for the legislative inaction. Democrats recalled that two years ago an off-year election swung control of the House and Senate into Republican hands. The entire membership of the House and thirty-three Senators must be elected in 1950.

McGrath aimed most of his criticism on the Senate's lengthy deliberation of measures before it. He predicted that long speeches indulged in by many Republican Senators would react against them at the polls and asserted that the "Republicans are proving that the Senate's rule of unlimited debate" can be a noose to strangle the Democratic processes."

Meanwhile, Senator Lucas, of Illinois, DOemocratic majority leader, has called a conference of party members for 10 a. m., tomorrow, to discuss the lagging Administration program. With a log jam of "must" legislation waiting action, Senator Lucas is expected to call up this week a public housing measure providing for construction of 810,000 units over a period of six years. It also calls for $1,500,000,000 for slum clearance, extensive housing research and rural housing provisions for grants and loans to farmers.

The bill was worked out on a bipartisan basis after Republicans rejected President Truman's original request for construction of 1,050,000 public housing units over a seven-year period.

Senator Bricker (R., Ohio) has served notice that he will attempt to attach a civil rights provision to the legislation and thereby almost certainly touch off a storm of Southern opposition. The maneuver will fail and will not start a filibuster by Southern Senators, according to Senator Ellender (D., La.), chief sponsor of the bill.

Ellender said many Senators will oppose the Bricker amendment because they feel civil rights legislation should be acted on separately. Bricker contends, however, that the Senate may not get an opportunity to act on the civil rights issue at this session and his amendment will give members an opportunity to "stand up and be counted on the issue."

With the Eighty-first Congress rounding the half way mark in its scheduled January to July 31 session, the faster-moving House planned to recess Thursday evening until after Easter. Representative Priest of Tennessee, Democratic whip, said the present schedule calls for action on the European aid program and possibly pending departmental appropriation bills before the recess.

White-Spot Fawn Birth at Bronx Zoo First on Continent

New York, April 10 (AP).—A white-spotted fawn, a nearly extinct species of deer which once roamed the Imperial Park near Peking, was born today at the Bronx Zoo.

William Bridges, curator of publications at the zoo, said the species, known as "Pere David's Deer," is considered the rarest in the world. It is the first of the species ever born in the American continent.

The deer have feet like those of a cow, the neck of a camel and the tail of a mule.

Most of the Imperial Park herd was slaughtered in 1900, Bridges said, but a few survivors were shipped to England and loosed in a 4000-acre park at Woburn.

Old Newfoundland Cultures to Be Sought

Andover, Mass., April 10 (U.P.)—A noted anthropologist said today he will leave for the northern coast of Newfoundland this summer to start a five-year search for traces of two extinct cultures that may have been among the earliest in northeastern America.

Elmer Harp, jr., curator of anthropology at the Dartmouth College museum, said he will seek tangible remains of the Beothuk Indians and the Cape Dorset Eskimos in northern Newfoundland and possibly southern Labrador.

Harp, who said he hoped to trace the origin of the two groups back to the mainland, said very little is known of the original civilizations of Newfoundland and Labrador.

He said he expected his expedition would complete an "archeological reconnaissance" of the area this summer and return in subsequent years to make excavations on the basis of the survey.

Harp, here for the tenth annual meeting of the Massachusetts Archeological Society, said the project will be financed by the Arctic Institute of North America, which has headquarters in New York City and Montreal, Quebec.

Vast Throng Sees Rites at Vatican

Vatican City, April 10 (AP).—A vast throng of the faithful, numbering 40,000 or more, crowded into the Basilica of St. Peters here today to usher in Holy Week with the rites of Palm Sunday.

Among the faithful were thousands of pilgrims from foreign lands.

Mass was celebrated, and the passion sung, by Msgr Ferdinando Prosperini, canon of the Vatican, at the high altar. Celebrating the mass with him were the priests and prelates of the Vatican.

In the name of the administration of the state of the Vatican City, Msgr. Camillo de Ramianis, vicar of the apostolic palaces, presented Pope Pius XII with an elaborate palm prepared by the monks of Santa Prisca Convent in Rome.

The pontiff on Monday will impart Easter communion to his lay aides, and on Thursday to his ecclesiatic aides, at private ceremonies.

Commemoration of the Crucifixion and death of Christ will begin at the Vatican on Wednesday, when the "Tenebrae" (darkness) service will be sung. During this, all but one altar candle—the one representing Christ—are gradually extinguished, to symbolize the Biblical darkening of the world at the death of Christ. This will be repeated Thursday and Friday.

On Holy Thursday, Msgr. Francesco Beretti, titular bishop of Caesarea Philippi, will sing a pontifical mass during which holy oils, produced at the Vatican basilica, will be blessed.

Thursday evening, Federico Cardinal Tedeschini will supervise the Canons of St. Peter in one of the church's most ancient ceremonies. This will be the ritual washing of the great papal altar with special oils and wines. First, all vestments and ornaments are removed. The altar is then sprinkled with oils and wines. It is then wiped with palm tassels.

Cardinal Tedeschini also will lead a special mass on Good Friday.

On Holy Saturday, a fire in the entrance of the Basilica will be blessed so that it may be used to light candles for the Basicila altars.

Snead Wins Masters, Fires 2d 67 in Row for 282

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 10.—They were still railing against those blarsted greens, and the cups thereon, as they came off the practice tees to start the last decisive round of the Masters. A Mr. Bud Maytag, wearing the green coat of Masters Tournament officialdom, was the villain of the scene.

Mister Maytag, who owns the washing machine company of the same name and thus is qualified by Dun and Bradstreet for membership on the greens committee of the ultra exclusive Augusta National Club, is the gentleman in charge of placing the cups on the green.

POVICH

He is gruff of speech and unfeeling of heart where the golf pros are concerned, else he wouldn't have devised the diabolical setting of the cups. Jimmy Demaret spoke out publicly last night against the fiendish location of the pins.

"If some daring guy will get 18 sticks of dynamite and place them in the cups, I will cheerfully set 'em off and blow the whole course to hell," said Demaret, "and make all of the players happy."

AS THEY CAME down to the last 18, it was Spalding vs. The Wilson Co. The big equipment manufacturers had their mercenaries battling it out, and it was somewhat surprising that Spalding was on top in the person of young Johnny Palmer. Spalding's man Palmer was a stroke in front as the final day began, but Wilson was charging hard with Lloyd Mangrum and Sammy Snead.

The big firms, who sell golf balls and clubs because their hired help make them popular, were a bit uneasy, though. Up there with the leaders were Joe Kirkwood, jr., unattached, and Johnny Bulla, who plays the so-called 75-cent drug store ball with great success to the utter consternation of the dollar-bill manufacturers.

Young Kirkwood, the golfing son of a golfing father, never bothered to join the P.G.A., but he is labeled a pro because he stooged for his dad in the trick-shot exhibitions years back. All of a sudden he became a dark horse with his 215 for 54 holes, only one stroke off the lead.

THE NATION'S COMIC STRIP fans were solidly behind Kirkwood, jr., it is assumed. In private life he is Joe Palooka, of the Hollywood films, and tall, blond and husky he looks it. If he doesn't win this tournament, which he is playing for the experience, it will still be all right with Mr. Palooka, who draws $2500 every week from the studio and can afford to blow.

The hunch players settled on Lloyd Mangrum as they teed off today, and for good reason. He was the partner of Byron Nelson, and you might say that Nelson's partner almost always wins these things at Augusta. Counting the two times he won it himself, Nelson has brought five winners home on the final day.

Last year it was Claude Harmon playing with Nelson, and Harmon won it. The year before, it was Jimmy Demaret, and he finished on top. In 1946, Herman Keiser had the good luck to be playing with Nelson, who saw him home, too. Today, Nelson and Mangrum, and for a while it looked like he was escorting his sixth winner.

When Palmer started to blow, it looked for all the world like Mangrum, the mustachioed imperturable, who coolly batted out a 34 on the out-nine, and had nothing but Snead to fear. Mangrum was scrambling, missing the greens, but approaching pretty dead and sinking the putts when he had to. The tough ones he played with his cigarette dangling from his mouth, and to the lovers of Mississippi steamboat lore he looked for all the world like Mr. Gaylor Ravenal.

SNEAD STARTED TO charge when he turned the first nine in 33, three under. He was tied with Mangrum at 54 holes. But the unpredictable Sammy soared to two fives on the tenth and eleventh, only to get solidly back in the business of winning the tournament with a birdie on the thirteenth.

Snead got a nice putt down, on the thirteenth. That led Gene Sarazen to observe that everybody had Snead wrong. He wasn't really a bad putter, no matter what the papers said. His trouble was his judgment of approach shots, Sarazen said. "These are the toughest greens I ever saw, and Snead is putting better than anybody else. How can you say the guy's a bad putter."

Snead and Mangrum divided the biggest galleries today. Snead's drives averaged nearly 300 yards, and he always had the best shots to the green. Tall and slender, he got wrists into it and powdered the ball. As Lester Rice observed, surveying Snead, "this could be the first time the Masters was ever won by a human one-iron."

Coolidge Defending Champion

Interhigh Baseball Season Gets Under Way on Thursday

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Coolidge's Colts launch their bid for a fourth straight Interhigh baseball championship Thursday when the expanded league opens its season with five games.

Eastern's Ramblers, who finished first last season, only to lose out to Coolidge in the playoffs, provide the opposition for the Colts in the important opener at Lincoln Park.

In the other Thursday curtain-raisers, Wilson plays at Anacostia, Western at Bell, Roosevelt at Central and McKinley Tech at Chamberlain. Bell and Chamberlain make their first appearances in league baseball competition.

Catcher Mike Mehalic is the only regular holdover from last season's championship team. But it appears that Coolidge has several good looking newcomers in Byron Anderson, a big righthanded pitcher, and Third Baseman Arnie Tranen and Shortstop Eddie Miller, who hit a long ball.

Eastern has the league's top-seeded pitcher, however, in Smilin' Eddie Kline, who won seven games before being upset by Coolidge in the playoffs.

The Wilson-Anacostia game should also be a corker. Both clubs have competent pitching; Wilson's wheelhorse is righthander Everett Eynon, whose granddad, Edward Eynon, is secretary of the Nats. Ev has won both of his preleague starts.

Anacostia will depend on Leo Kerschbaum and Jim Faulkner, the battery which carried it to the finals against Coolidge last season.

Altogether 32 games are on the scholastic baseball slate this week. The outstanding nonleague game finds Eastern invading Arlington for Washington-Lee's first night game of the season.

Mikan's Wrist Chipped, Caps' Hopes Rise

Lakers Still Can Win It All Tonight

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

George Mikan has a fractured right wrist and will play very little, if at all, against the Washington Caps tonight.

The six-foot 10-inch Minneapolis scoring sensation received his injury in Saturday's 83-71 Cap victory over the Lakers. X-rays made yesterday revealed a bone chip in the wrist on his shooting hand.

Without Mikan, the Lakers' chances of winning the best four of seven series take a sharp nosedive. They need only one more victory to eliminate the Caps, but it is doubtful if they can accomplish this with their one-man scoring machine out of whack.

His arm tightly bound—but not in a cast—from elbow to fingers, Mikan himself last night didn't know whether he could make it for tonight's fifth game of basketball's world series.

"It's awfully sore, awfully sore," the distraught star moaned. "I had trouble holding on to the ball last night and now I'm having trouble moving my arm."

Another Checkup

X-rayed and treated at Georgetown Hospital following Saturday's Uline game, Mikan will be examined again this morning.

"Even if he does play," sighed Laker Coach Johnny Kundla, "I doubt if he'll see much action with his wrist in its present condition."

Mikan suffered a nasty spill during the first five minutes of the game when Kleggie Hermsen, Cap center, crashed into him while Mikan was driving in for a layup.

Mikan lost his balance and fell to the floor heavily. Up to that point he had been wrecking the Caps. Behind his phenomenal scoring, the favored Mikanapolis crew held a 14-6 lead with Kikan accounting for 10 of their points.

Caps Now 7-Point Choice

With the Laker hot shot hurt, the Caps swept to their first victory, a triumph they needed to stay alive in the series.

Now, with Mikan out or his effectiveness reduced, the Caps suddenly find themselves seven-point favorites to win tonight and carry the series back to Minneapolis.

Mikan is the Minneapolis team. He averaged 28 points a game during the regular season and 35 in the eight playoff games. Whether he scores or not, which is so infrequent that it's an oddity of the first water, Mikan is a threat.

With him in the lineup, the Caps must reshuffle their defense and assign three players to try and stop him. This strategy boomeranged on the Washingtonians last Wednesday as Mikan played the role of a perfect decoy.

He took only three shots and made only 10 points. With the Caps concentrating on him, however, Swede Carlson, Herm Schaeffer and Pollard did the scoring and the Lakers had achieved the desired result—victory.

Mikan Is Their Man

The Lakers without Mikan can be likened to the Boston Red Sox without Ted Williams, Joe Louis without a right hand or Citation with a lame leg. He's that important.

With Mikan out or ineffective and Bones McKinney back in their lineup, the Caps were a rather cocky crew last night.

"We would have whipped 'em with a sound Mikan," exclaimed Sonny Hertzberg, who wheelhorsed the Cap attack Saturday.

"We're back in the groove now," remarked Jack Nichols, who shot the Caps to their victory with a 27-point expedition.

Nichols, McKinney, Hermsen, and Hertzberg, key men in Washington's do-or-die triumph, will again play "as long as they can stand up," said Cap Coach Red Auerbach. "We'll spot Johnny Norlander, Dick Schulz, Fred Scolari, Dick O'Keefe, Leo Katkaveck, and Matt Zunic and we'll win."

Black Goes Home, Denies Quitting

Cleveland, April 10 (AP).—President Bill Veeck of the Cleveland Indians today said he probably would confer later this week with Don Black, Tribe hurler who returned home last night.

Black, who suffered a hemorrhage near his brain last September, reported he was here "for a rest."

The husky pitcher of no-hit fame denied he was quitting baseball, but said he did not know when he would resume training. He told friends "I just haven't got the soup."

—'Awfully Excited'—

Mrs. Snead, Here, Says Her Hubby Was Confident

The happiest woman in Washington yesterday was Mrs. Sammy Snead, wife of the new Masters' golf champion.

"I was awfully excited," she said, "but somehow I felt Sammy would win."

Mrs. Snead, who played golf at Bethesda Country Club, is in Washington with the Sneads' 4-year-old son, Samuel Jackson Snead, jr., who underwent an eye operation last week.

"Gosh, Sam sank a 25-footer on the eighteenth," she exclaimed. "And they said Sam couldn't putt. A 25-footer. Isn't that wonderful?"

The wife of the new Masters champion said Sam told her during the Greensboro Open—which Sam also won—that he thought he had found his putting touch.

"You know, he bought a new putter down at Greensboro. It's about the 300th putter he's had, but he said he liked that one better than any. He seemed to have more confidence in his putting than ever before. And when Sam's putting, he's awful hard to beat.

"Now he's won the PGA and Masters. Wouldn't it be wonderful if he won the Open, too?"

Toronto Rookie Trips Wings, 3-1

Detroit, April 10 (AP).—Young Sid Smith, up from the Maple Leafs' Pittsburgh farm club, plunked in all three goals tonight as Toronto belted the Detroit Red Wings, 3 to 1, for a two-game lead in their Stanley Cup hockey series. The best-of-seven cup finals move to Toronto Wednesday for the third game.

Hershey Takes Lead In American Playoffs

Providence, R. I., April 10 (AP).—A three-goal outburst in the second period gave the Hershey Bears a 5-to-2 victory over the Rhode Island Reds in the third game of their American Hockey League Calder Cup series tonight before a 6567 crowd at the auditorium. The Bears now hold a 2-to-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

Paige Hurls Tribe Victory

Oklahoma City, Okla., April 10 (AP).—Lanky Satchel Paige and fireballer Bob Feller limited Oklahoma City to 4 hits today as the Cleveland Indians won, 3 to 0.

Paige, who gained credit for the triumph, allowed only two blows in his five innings on the mound. Feller completed the game and gave up the other two safeties.

The game, played before 9052 in damp, cold weather, marked Cleveland's fourth straight victory. Two Oklahoma City flingers were nicked for 10 hits by the Indians.

Class B Greenville Boys Beat New York Yankees, 4 to 3

Greenville, Tex., April 10 (U.P.).—The Greenville Majors of the Class B Big State League, with only three weeks of training, shelled Allie Rynolds off the mound today and beat the New York Yankees, 4 to 3, before a satisfied crowd of 2951.

Four errors, two of them by Snuffy Stirnweiss, helped the Yankees' downfall. Reynolds, who was to have pitched the entire game, was belted for three runs in the fourth and yielded to Frank Hiller after the fifth.

Joe DiMaggio played only two innings and collected one hit in two trips.

At Austin, the Yankees' second squad beat Austin of the Big State League, 10 to 7, with Ed Lopat and Joe Page hurling for New York.

George Kell, who blasted a three-run homer yesterday, came back with a grand slam circuit blow today. George Vico and Vic Wertz also homered for the Tigers while Bob Moyer got a four-bagger, double and single for Little Rock.

Nats Whip Chattanooga In 9th, 7-3

Special to The Washington Post.

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 10.—Three runs in the ninth inning sealed and delivered a 7-3 victory to the Nats today as their Chattanooga Lookout farmhands bowed to the pitching of Sid Hudson and Dick Weik.

Except in the ninth, the 2499 customers were treated to a pretty even game.

Then, with Rookie Eric Felton on the mound for the Lookouts, the Nats "exploded" with singles by Kozar, Evans, Coan and Lewis to put the affair on ice.

Hudson, making his first professional appearance in his home town, went the first seven innings for the Nats and gave up seven hits.

Weik Takes Over

He bequeathed a 4-2 lead to Weik, who promptly gave away one run in the eighth with a walk to Lookout Manager George Myatt, a wild pitch and Bob Reid's single.

The Nats, with their final spree, ran up 10 hits to the Lookouts' eight but they weren't exactly pounding the offerings of Chattanooga starter Spec Dozier.

The young righthander who spent a time in Washington's training camp was touched for only five safeties in the first six innings.

Lookouts Take Lead

In the fourth Chattanooga went ahead on Kozar's overthrow of first, Babe Ellis' double to right, Reid's single and Angel Fleitas' long fly. But the Nats took a lead they never lost in the fifth inning when, with two out, Evans doubled to center, Hudson and Coan walked, and Dente got off a two-run single to center.

The Nat margin grew to 4-2 in the sixth as Dozier walked and Vollmer and Robinson singled and Kozar lofted a long out.

Evans and Dente were the day's hitting stars, Evans collecting three hits and Dente driving in three runs.

Defensively, however, the Lookouts' manager, Myatt, was outstanding with a pair of fancy plays that robbed Yost and Hudson of hits.

The Nats move over to Spartanburg, S. C., to meet that city's Class B Tri-State League team tomorrow afternoon.

Navy Toddlers Toil, Sweat, Shed Tears

Annapolis, Md., April 10 (AP).—There were sweat and tears today in the thirty-first annual Navy junior boxing tournament, but no blood and no official decisions.

For the first time since its inception the jab jamboree for pint-sized pugilists saw no hands raised in victory and no medals awarded to the toddling participants.

Spike Webb, Navy's boxing coach and originator of the event for sons of Naval Academy personnel, explained that formal decisions were omitted to prevent the wounding of young spirits. In the past, he indicated, the youthful gladiators often did their best fighting after the winner was announced.

Parents on Hand

But for the 400 anxious mothers and proud papas on hand, every second of the three one-minute rounds was as fraught as ever with action and laughs.

The pace of the afternoon was set in the first of the 16 bouts, which pitted Billy Ryder against another 3-year-old campaigner, Nipper Schoenfield. The Nipper, 35 pounds of fighting fury, scored 2 knockdowns with 1 punch.

Shortly after the opening bell he connected with a vicious roundhouse that sent young Ryder to the canvas, but the blow packed such force that the Nipper himself went sprawling after his opponent.

The rest of the bout was spent with each man circling his opponent and glaring menacingly. On the Associated Press scorecard it was a draw.

"Which Way Is Out?"

A bit of persuasion by his Midshipmen handlers between rounds was credited with saving 4-year-old Lanny Wolf from a technical knockout at the hands of Skipper Smith.

Smith floored his antagonist twice in the opening session. Just as the second round ended he unleased a series of bolo rights and retreated to his corner, whereupon Wolf burst into tears and began looking for the nearest exit.

Sensing the crisis, however, his seconds rushed to his side and whispered an undisclosed line of strategy which changed him into a new man.

The third round found him stalking his opponent and trying for a knockout. He was awarded the round on the Associated Press card, but the decision went to Smith by virture of his early lead. Both weighed 38.

In other bouts here's how the Associated Press scorer saw it:

Mark Shifflette, age 4, 36 lbs., decisioned Rodger Yerbro, 4, 36. Bill Shields, jr., 4, 40, and Billy Ogden, 5, 42½, drew. Danny James, 4, 35, decisioned Danny Rye, 4, 35. David Busey, 5, 40, and Laddie Krejci, 4, 45, drew. Pem Wall, 6, 48, and David Rye 6, 49, drew. Robbin Tucker, 5, 46, and Tommy Bouve, 6, 58, drew. Robert Harbold, 6, 60, decisioned Allen Beal, 6, 75. Dickie Sunderland, 6, 50, decisioned Jeffrey Callaghan, 5, 50. Bruce Casserly, 5, 48, decisioned David Eastman, 5, 48. Allan Yerbro, 7, 65, and Terry Robinson, 8, 63, drew. Tommy duMont, 9, 70, and Russell Robinson, 9, 72, drew.

Tavern 4-3 Victor

Royal Tavern nosed out Crosstown, 4—3, yesterday in one of three Columbia Road Softball League games. In the other games, Cafedon spanked Friendly Grill, 13-3, and Columbia Grill walloped M & M Pharmacy, 12-4.

Parker Wins in Italy

Monte Carlo, April 10 (AP).—Frank Parker, American Davis Cup veteran from Los Angeles, defeated Italy's Gianni Cucelli, 2—6, 6—3, 6—0, 6—4, in the final of an international tennis tournament today.

Bulla Ties Mangrum for 2d; Worsham Has 68-289

By Bus Ham
Post Reporter

Augusta, Ga., April 10.—Sammy Snead refused to let his game go to the dogs today, scored his second 67, 5 under par, in as many days and won the Masters golf title with a 72-hole total of 282.

Sammy played the last seven holes in 4 under par after having dog trouble on the eleventh, and beat Lloyd Mangrum, Chicago, the early leader, and Johnny Bulla, Pittsburgh, by three shots.

Snead's victory was his first in the Masters and he now has won all of the major titles except the National open.

Johnny Palmer, upcoming Badin, N. C., youngster who went into today's play with a one-stroke edge over the field at 214, tied at 286 with Jim Turnesa of the famed New York golfing brothers.

Lew Worsham, former National open champion from Washington, D. C., was the only other player who beat 290. Worsham finished brilliantly with a 68, 4 under par, for 289.

Shoots 8 Birdies

Snead came to the spacious 18th green with the championship virtually clinched and approximately 15,000 spectators banked in row after row.

He tapped a ticklish 25-foot putt that found its way into the cup on the sloping green for a birdie 3—his eighth birdie of the round.

Snead then and there became just about the most popular champion in the 15-year history of the Masters.

As things turned out, it looked like an easy victory for Snead but there were moments back at the 10th and 11th hole when Sammy had to take himself in hand.

Eleventh Hole Troublesome

He had turned the nine in 33, three under, and still was locked in a tight struggle with his playing partner, Turnesa, as well as Palmer and Mangrum.

On the tenth, a 465-yarder that plays as a par four, Sammy went over the green on his second, chipped back short and took a five.

Then he almost let his game go to the bowwows on the eleventh, a 415-yarder.

His second was nicely on and he left himself an 18-inch putt, some dogs began fighting in a country road that runs along the eleventh fairway about 50 yards away.

There is an opening in the trees and foliage there on the edge of the golf course and several hundred nonpaying spectators were crowded in a small area.

Dogs Bark, Fans Shout

Some of them began shouting at the barking dogs, Snead tried to concentrate, but muffed the putt and almost let his temper get the better of him.

Worsham's Score Day's Second Best

Augusta, Ga., April 10.—Lew Worsham of Washington, D. C., today played like the Worsham who won the National Open title in 1947.

In the final round of the Masters championship, Worsham shot a 68, four under par, the only player who had a better round today was Sammy Snead, whose 67 carried him to the title.

Worsham went out in 33, and came home in 35. His card showed six birdies and two bogies.

Par out	454	343	454	—36
Worsham	454	342	344	—33
Par in	443	545	344	—36—72
Worsham	553	444	343	—35—68

Worsham's fine finish enabled him to wind up with a highly respectable 72-hole total of 289, topped by only five players in the field of 58.—BUS HAM.

Snead Wins Masters, Fires 2d 67 in Row for 282

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 10.—They were still railing against those blarsted greens, and the cups thereon, as they came off the practice tees to start the last decisive round of the Masters. A Mr. Bud Maytag, wearing the green coat of Masters Tournament officialdom, was the villain of the scene.

Mister Maytag, who owns the washing machine company of the same name and thus is qualified by Dun and Bradstreet for membership on the greens committee of the ultra exclusive Augusta National Club, is the gentleman in charge of placing the cups on the green.

POVICH

He is gruff of speech and unfeeling of heart where the golf pros are concerned, else he wouldn't have devised the diabolical setting of the cups. Jimmy Demaret spoke out publicly last night against the fiendish location of the pins.

"If some daring guy will get 18 sticks of dynamite and place them in the cups, I will cheerfully set 'em off and blow the whole course to hell," said Demaret, "and make all of the players happy."

AS THEY CAME down to the last 18, it was Spalding vs. The Wilson Co. The big equipment manufacturers had their mercenaries battling it out, and it was somewhat surprising that Spalding was on top in the person of young Johnny Palmer. Spalding's man Palmer was a stroke in front as the final day began, but Wilson was charging hard with Lloyd Mangrum and Sammy Snead.

The big firms, who sell golf balls and clubs because their hired help make them popular, were a bit uneasy, though. Up there with the leaders were Joe Kirkwood, jr., unattached, and Johnny Bulla, who plays the so-called 75-cent drug store ball with great success to the utter consternation of the dollar-bill manufacturers.

Young Kirkwood, the golfing son of a golfing father, never bothered to join the P.G.A., but he is labeled a pro because he stooged for his dad in the trick-shot exhibitions years back. All of a sudden he became a dark horse with his 215 for 54 holes, only one stroke off the lead.

THE NATION'S COMIC STRIP fans were solidly behind Kirkwood, jr., it is assumed. In private life he is Joe Palooka, of the Hollywood films, and tall, blond and husky he looks it. If he doesn't win this tournament, which he is playing for the experience, it will still be all right with Mr. Palooka, who draws $2500 every week from the studio and can afford to blow.

The hunch players settled on Lloyd Mangrum as they teed off today, and for good reason. He was the partner of Byron Nelson, and you might say that Nelson's partner almost always wins these things at Augusta. Counting the two times he won it himself, Nelson has brought five winners home on the final day.

Last year it was Claude Harmon playing with Nelson, and Harmon won it. The year before, it was Jimmy Demaret, and he finished on top. In 1946, Herman Keiser had the good luck to be playing with Nelson, who saw him home, too. Today, Nelson and Mangrum, and for a while it looked like he was escorting his sixth winner.

When Palmer started to blow, it looked for all the world like Mangrum, the mustachioed imperturable, who coolly batted out a 34 on the out-nine, and had nothing but Snead to fear. Mangrum was scrambling, missing the greens, but approaching pretty dead and sinking the putts when he had to. The tough ones he played with his cigarette dangling from his mouth, and to the lovers of Mississippi steamboat lore he looked for all the world like Mr. Gaylor Ravenal.

SNEAD STARTED TO charge when he turned the first nine in 33, three under. He was tied with Mangrum at 54 holes. But the unpredictable Sammy soared to two fives on the tenth and eleventh, only to get solidly back in the business of winning the tournament with a birdie on the thirteenth.

Snead got a nice putt down, on the thirteenth. That led Gene Sarazen to observe that everybody had Snead wrong. He wasn't really a bad putter, no matter what the papers said. His trouble was his judgment of approach shots, Sarazen said. "These are the toughest greens I ever saw, and Snead is putting better than anybody else. How can you say the guy's a bad putter."

Snead and Mangrum divided the biggest galleries today. Snead's drives averaged nearly 300 yards, and he always had the best shots to the green. Tall and slender, he got wrists into it and powdered the ball. As Lester Rice observed, surveying Snead, "this could be the first time the Masters was ever won by a human one-iron."

Coolidge Defending Champion

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Coolidge's Colts launch their bid for a fourth straight Interhigh baseball championship Thursday when the expanded league opens its season with five games.

Eastern's Ramblers, who finished first last season, only to lose out to Coolidge in the playoffs, provide the opposition for the Colts in the important opener at Lincoln Park.

In the other Thursday curtain-raisers, Wilson plays at Anacostia, Western at Bell, Roosevelt at Central and McKinley Tech at Chamberlain. Bell and Chamberlain make their first appearances in league baseball competition.

Catcher Mike Mehalic is the only regular holdover from last season's championship team. But it appears that Coolidge has several good looking newcomers in Byron Anderson, a big righthanded pitcher, and Third Baseman Arnie Tranen and Shortstop Eddie Miller, who hit a long ball.

Eastern has the league's top-seeded pitcher, however, in Smilin' Eddie Kline, who won seven games before being upset by Coolidge in the playoffs.

The Wilson-Anacostia game should also be a corker. Both clubs have competent pitching; Wilson's wheelhorse is righthander Everett Eynon, whose granddad, Edward Eynon, is secretary of the Nats. Ev has won both of his preleague starts.

Anacostia will depend on Leo Kerschbaum and Jim Faulkner, the battery which carried it to the finals against Coolidge last season.

Altogether 32 games are on the scholastic baseball slate this week. The outstanding nonleague game finds Eastern invading Arlington for Washington-Lee's first night game of the season.

Mikan's Wrist Chipped, Caps' Hopes Rise

Lakers Still Can Win It All Tonight

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

George Mikan has a fractured right wrist and will play very little, if at all, against the Washington Caps tonight.

The six-foot 10-inch Minneapolis scoring sensation received his injury in Saturday's 83-71 Cap victory over the Lakers. X-rays made yesterday revealed a bone chip in the wrist on his shooting hand.

Without Mikan, the Lakers' chances of winning the best four of seven series take a sharp nosedive. They need only one more victory to eliminate the Caps, but it is doubtful if they can accomplish this with their one-man scoring machine out of whack.

His arm tightly bound—but not in a cast—from elbow to fingers, Mikan himself last night didn't know whether he could make it for tonight's fifth game of basketball's world series.

"It's awfully sore, awfully sore," the distraught star moaned. "I had trouble holding on to the ball last night and now I'm having trouble moving my arm."

Another Checkup

X-rayed and treated at Georgetown Hospital following Saturday's Uline game, Mikan will be examined again this morning.

"Even if he does play," sighed Laker Coach Johnny Kundla, "I doubt if he'll see much action with his wrist in its present condition."

Mikan suffered a nasty spill during the first five minutes of the game when Kleggie Hermsen, Cap center, crashed into him while Mikan was driving in for a layup.

Mikan lost his balance and fell to the floor heavily. Up to that point he had been wrecking the Caps. Behind his phenomenal scoring, the favored Mikanapolis crew held a 14-6 lead with Kikan accounting for 10 of their points.

Caps Now 7-Point Choice

With the Laker hot shot hurt, the Caps swept to their first victory, a triumph they needed to stay alive in the series.

Now, with Mikan out or his effectiveness reduced, the Caps suddenly find themselves seven-point favorites to win tonight and carry the series back to Minneapolis.

Mikan is the Minneapolis team. He averaged 28 points a game during the regular season and 35 in the eight playoff games. Whether he scores or not, which is so infrequent that it's an oddity of the first water, Mikan is a threat.

With him in the lineup, the Caps must reshuffle their defense and assign three players to try and stop him. This strategy boomeranged on the Washingtonians last Wednesday as Mikan played the role of a perfect decoy.

He took only three shots and made only 10 points. With the Caps concentrating on him, however, Swede Carlson, Herm Schaeffer and Pollard did the scoring and the Lakers had achieved the desired result—victory.

Mikan Is Their Man

The Lakers without Mikan can be likened to the Boston Red Sox without Ted Williams, Joe Louis without a right hand or Citation with a lame leg. He's that important.

With Mikan out or ineffective and Bones McKinney back in their lineup, the Caps were a rather cocky crew last night.

"We would have whipped 'em with a sound Mikan," exclaimed Sonny Hertzberg, who wheelhorsed the Cap attack Saturday.

"We're back in the groove now," remarked Jack Nichols, who shot the Caps to their victory with a 27-point expedition.

Nichols, McKinney, Hermsen, and Hertzberg, key men in Washington's do-or-die triumph, will again play "as long as they can stand up," said Cap Coach Red Auerbach. "We'll spot Johnny Norlander, Dick Schulz, Fred Scolari, Dick O'Keefe, Leo Katkaveck, and Matt Zunic and we'll win."

Black Goes Home, Denies Quitting

Cleveland, April 10 (AP).—President Bill Veeck of the Cleveland Indians today said he probably would confer later this week with Don Black, Tribe hurler who returned home last night.

Black, who suffered a hemorrhage near his brain last September, reported he was here "for a rest."

The husky pitcher of no-hit fame denied he was quitting baseball, but said he did not know when he would resume training. He told friends "I just haven't got the soup."

'Awfully Excited'

Mrs. Snead, Here, Says Her Hubby Was Confident

The happiest woman in Washington yesterday was Mrs. Sammy Snead, wife of the new Masters' golf champion.

"I was awfully excited," she said, "but somehow I felt Sammy would win."

Mrs. Snead, who played golf at Bethesda Country Club, is in Washington with the Sneads' 4-year-old son, Samuel Jackson Snead, jr., who underwent an eye operation last week.

"Gosh, Sam sank a 25-footer on the eighteenth," she exclaimed. "And they said Sam couldn't putt. A 25-footer. Isn't that wonderful?"

The wife of the new Masters champion said Sam told her during the Greensboro Open—which Sam also won—that he thought he had found his putting touch.

"You know, he bought a new putter down at Greensboro. It's about the 300th putter he's had, but he said he liked that one better than any. He seemed to have more confidence in his putting than ever before. And when Sam's putting, he's awful hard to beat.

"Now he's won the PGA and Masters. Wouldn't it be wonderful if he won the Open, too?"

Toronto Rookie Trips Wings, 3-1

Detroit, April 10 (AP).—Young Sid Smith, up from the Maple Leafs' Pittsburgh farm club, plunked in all three goals tonight as Toronto belted the Detroit Red Wings, 3 to 1, for a two-game lead in their Stanley Cup hockey series. The best-of-seven cup finals move to Toronto Wednesday for the third game.

Hershey Takes Lead In American Playoffs

Providence, R. I., April 10 (AP).—A three-goal outburst in the second period gave the Hershey Bears a 5-to-2 victory over the Rhode Island Reds in the third game of their American Hockey League Calder Cup series tonight before a 6567 crowd at the auditorium. The Bears now hold a 2-to-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

Paige Hurls Tribe Victory

Oklahoma City, Okla., April 10 (AP).—Lanky Satchel Paige and fireballer Bob Feller limited Oklahoma City to 4 hits today as the Cleveland Indians won, 3 to 0.

Paige, who gained credit for the triumph, allowed only two blows in his five innings on the mound. Feller completed the game and gave up the other two safeties.

The game, played before 9052 in damp, cold weather, marked Cleveland's fourth straight victory. Two Oklahoma City flingers were nicked for 10 hits by the Indians.

Class B Greenville Boys Beat New York Yankees, 4 to 3

Greenville, Tex., April 10 (U.P.).—The Greenville Majors of the Class B Big State League, with only three weeks of training, shelled Allie Reynolds off the mound today and beat the New York Yankees, 4 to 3, before a satisfied crowd of 2951.

Four errors, two of them by Snuffy Stirnweiss, helped the Yankees' downfall. Reynolds, who was to have pitched the entire game, was belted for three runs in the fourth and yielded to Frank Hiller after the fifth.

Joe DiMaggio played only two innings and collected one hit in two trips.

At Austin, the Yankees' second squad beat Austin of the Big State League, 10 to 7, with Ed Lopat and Joe Page hurling for New York.

Virgil (Fire) Trucks went the distance for Detroit, giving up nine hits, three of them of the scratch variety.

George Kell, who blasted a three-run homer yesterday, came back with a grand slam circuit blow today. George Vico and Vic Wertz also homered for the Tigers while Bob Moyer got a four-bagger, double and single for Little Rock.

In Baltimore, the B squad didn't fare as well, and dropped a 4-2 game to the Baltimore Orioles. Lefty Warren Spahn went the distance for the B squad, giving up six hits. Bryan Stephens held the Braves to three safeties.

Nats Whip Chattanooga In 9th, 7-3

Special to The Washington Post.

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 10.—Three runs in the ninth inning sealed and delivered a 7-3 victory to the Nats today as their Chattanooga Lookout farmhands bowed to the pitching of Sid Hudson and Dick Weik.

Except in the ninth, the 2499 customers were treated to a pretty even game.

Then, with Rookie Eric Felton on the mound for the Lookouts, the Nats "exploded" with singles by Kozar, Evans, Coan and Lewis to put the affair on ice.

Hudson, making his first professional appearance in his home town, went the first seven innings for the Nats and gave up seven hits.

Weik Takes Over

He bequeathed a 4-2 lead to Weik, who promptly gave away one run in the eighth with a walk to Lookout Manager George Myatt, a wild pitch and Bob Reid's single.

The Nats, with their final spree, ran up 10 hits to the Lookouts' eight but they weren't exactly pounding the offerings of Chattanooga starter Spec Dozier.

The young righthander who spent a time in Washington's training camp was touched for only five safeties in the first six innings.

Lookouts Take Lead

In the fourth Chattanooga went ahead on Kozar's overthrow of first, Babe Ellis' double to right, Reid's single and Angel Fleitas' long fly. But the Nats took a lead they never lost in the fifth inning when, with two out, Evans doubled to center, Hudson and Coan walked, and Dente got off a two-run single to center.

The Nat margin grew to 4-2 in the sixth as Dozier walked and Vollmer and Robinson singled and Kozar lofted a long out.

Evans and Dente were the day's hitting stars, Evans collecting three hits and Dente driving in three runs.

Defensively, however, the Lookouts' manager, Myatt, was outstanding with a pair of fancy plays that robbed Yost and Hudson of hits.

The Nats move over to Spartanburg, S. C., to meet that city's Class B Tri-State League team tomorrow afternoon.

Navy Toddlers Toil, Sweat, Shed Tears

Annapolis, Md., April 10 (AP).—There were sweat and tears today in the thirty-first annual Navy junior boxing tournament, but no blood and no official decisions.

For the first time since its inception the jab jamboree for pint-sized pugilists saw no hands raised in victory and no medals awarded to the toddling participants.

Spike Webb, Navy's boxing coach and originator of the event for sons of Naval Academy personnel, explained that formal decisions were omitted to prevent the wounding of young spirits. In the past, he indicated, the youthful gladiators often did their best fighting after the winner was announced.

Parents on Hand

But for the 400 anxious mothers and proud papas on hand, every second of the three one-minute rounds was as fraught as ever with action and laughs.

The pace of the afternoon was set in the first of the 16 bouts, which pitted Billy Ryder against another 3-year-old campaigner, Nipper Schoenfield. The Nipper, 35 pounds of fighting fury, scored 2 knockdowns with 1 punch.

Shortly after the opening bell he connected with a vicious roundhouse that sent young Ryder to the canvas, but the blow packed such force that the Nipper himself went sprawling after his opponent.

The rest of the bout was spent with each man circling his opponent and glaring menacingly. On the Associated Press scorecard it was a draw.

"Which Way Is Out?"

A bit of persuasion by his Midshipmen handlers between rounds was credited with saving 4-year-old Lanny Wolf from a technical knockout at the hands of Skipper Smith.

Smith floored his antagonist twice in the opening session. Just as the second round ended he unleased a series of bolo rights and retreated to his corner, whereupon Wolf burst into tears and began looking for the nearest exit.

Sensing the crisis, however, his seconds rushed to his side and whispered an undisclosed line of strategy which changed him into a new man.

The third round found him stalking his opponent and trying for a knockout. He was awarded the round on the Associated Press card, but the decision went to Smith by virture of his early lead. Both weighed 38.

In other bouts here's how the Associated Press scorer saw it:

Mark Shifflette, age 4, 36 lbs., decisioned Rodger Yerbro, 4, 30. Bill Shields, jr., 4, 40, and Billy Owens, 5, 45, drew. Danny James, 4, 35, decisioned Danny Rye, 4, 38. David Busey, 5, 40, and Laddie Krejci, 4, 45, drew. Pem Well, 6, 48, and David Rye 6, 49, drew. Robbin Tucker, 5, 46, and Tommy Bouve, 6, 58, drew. Robert Harbold, 6, 60, decisioned Allen Beal, 6, 75. Dickie Sunderland, 6, 50, decisioned Jeffrey Callaghan, 5, 50. Bruce Casserly, 5, 48, decisioned David Eastman, 5, 48. Allan Yarbro, 7, 65, and Terry Robinson, 8, 63, drew. Tommy duMont, 9, 70, and Russell Robinson, 9, 72, drew.

Tavern 4-3 Victor

Royal Tavern nosed out Crosstown, 4—3, yesterday in one of three Columbia Road Softball League games. In the other games, Cafedon spanked Friendly Grill, 13-3, and Columbia Grill walloped M & M Pharmacy, 12-4.

Monte Carlo, April 10 (AP). — Frank Parker, American Davis Cup veteran from Los Angeles, defeated Italy's Gianni Cucelli, 2—6, 6—3, 6—0, 6—4, in the final of an international tennis tournament today.

Bulla Ties Mangrum for 2d; Worsham Has 68-289

By Bus Ham
Post Reporter

Augusta, Ga., April 10.—Sammy Snead refused to let his game go to the dogs today, scored his second 67, 5 under par, in as many days and won the Masters golf title with a 72-hole total of 282.

Sammy played the last seven holes in 4 under par after having dog trouble on the eleventh, and beat Lloyd Mangrum, Chicago, the early leader, and Johnny Bulla,

Worsham's Score Day's Second Best

Augusta, Ga., April 10.—Lew Worsham of Washington, D. C., today played like the Worsham who won the National Open title in 1947.

In the final round of the Masters championship, Worsham shot a 68, four under par, the only player who had a better round today was Sammy Snead, whose 67 carried him to the title.

Worsham went out in 33, and came home in 35. His card showed six birdies and two bogies.

Par out	454	343	454	—36
Worsham	454	342	344	—33
Par in	443	543	344	—36—72
Worsham	553	444	343	—35—68

Worsham's fine finish enabled him to wind up with a highly respectable 72-hole total of 289, topped by only five players in the field of 58.—BUS HAM.

Pittsburgh, by three shots.

Snead's victory was his first in the Masters and he now has won all of the major titles except the National open.

Johnny Palmer, upcoming Badin, N. C., youngster who went into today's play with a one-stroke edge over the field at 214, tied at 286 with Jim Turnesa of the famed New York golfing brothers.

Lew Worsham, former National open champion from Washington, D. C., was the only other player who beat 290. Worsham finished brilliantly with a 68, 4 under par, for 289.

Shoots 8 Birdies

Snead came to the spacious 18th green with the championship virtually clinched and approximately 15,000 spectators banked in row after row.

He tapped a ticklish 25-foot putt that found its way into the cup on the sloping green for a birdie 3—his eighth birdie of the round.

Snead then and there became just about the most popular champion in the 15-year history of the Masters.

As things turned out, it looked like an easy victory for Snead but there were moments back at the 10th and 11th hole when Sammy had to take himself in hand.

Eleventh Hole Troublesome

He had turned the nine in 33, three under, and still was locked in a tight struggle with his playing partner, Turnesa, as well as Palmer and Mangrum.

On the tenth, a 465-yarder that plays as a par four, Sammy went over the green on his second, chipped back short and took a five.

Then he almost let his game go to the bowwows on the eleventh, a 415-yarder.

His second was nicely on and he left himself an 18-inch putt, some dogs began fighting in a country road that runs along the eleventh fairway about 50 yards away.

There is an opening in the trees and foliage there on the edge of the golf course and several hundred nonpaying spectators were crowded in a small area.

Dogs Bark, Fans Shout

Some of them began shouting at the barking dogs, Snead tried to concentrate, but muffed the putt and almost let his temper get the better of him.

Vast Throng Sees Rites at Vatican

Vatican City, April 10 (AP).—A vast throng of the faithful, numbering 40,000 or more, crowded into the Basilica of St. Peters here today to usher in Holy Week with the rites of Palm Sunday.

Among the faithful were thousands of pilgrims from foreign lands.

Mass was celebrated, and the passion sung, by Msgr Ferdinando Prosperini, canon of the Vatican, at the high altar. Celebrating the mass with him were the priests and prelates of the Vatican.

In the name of the administration of the state of the Vatican City, Msgr. Camillo de Ramianis, vicar of the apostolic palaces, presented Pope Pius XII with an elaborate palm prepared by the monks of Santa Prisca Convent in Rome.

The pontiff on Monday will impart Easter communion to his lay aides, and on Thursday to his ecclesiatic aides, at private ceremonies.

Commemoration of the Crucifixion and death of Christ will begin at the Vatican on Wednesday, when the "Tenebrae" (darkness) service will be sung. During this, all but one altar candle—the one representing Christ—are gradually extinguished, to symbolize the Biblical darkening of the world at the death of Christ. This will be repeated Thursday and Friday.

On Holy Thursday, Msgr. Francesco Beretti, titular bishop of Caesarea Philippi, will sing a pontifical mass during which holy oils, produced at the Vatican basilica, will be blessed.

Thursday evening, Federico Cardinal Tedeschini will supervise the Canons of St. Peter in one of the church's most ancient ceremonies. This will be the ritual washing of the great papal altar with special oils and wines. First, all vestments and ornaments are removed. The altar is then sprinkled with oils and wines. It is then wiped with palm tassels.

Cardinal Tedeschini also will lead a special mass on Good Friday.

On Holy Saturday, a fire in the entrance of the Basilica will be blessed so that it may be used to light candles for the Basicila altars.

Chesapeake Trial Feature at Md. Track

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

The $10,000 added Chesapeake Trial—the race that gained national prominence last year when Saggy upset Citation—tops the initial card at Havre de Grace today. The dash of 6 furlongs, as the name implies, is a conditioner leading up to the rich Chesapeake Stakes as well as other important fixtures for the 3-year-old talent.

Well subscribed, the Trial has drawn 13 overnight entries, including some Derby and Preakness hopefuls including Fred W. Hooper's Ocean Drive, one of 1948's better 2-year-olds but overshadowed by the same stable's Olympia, current Derby favorite.

Ocean Drive earned $84,825 last year, his efforts including five victories. In his first outing this year, the colt downed the famous Olympia as well as Sidney Crew's Commodore Lea (an opponent today) in the Hibiscus Stakes at Hialeah.

The Pincher Made Hopeful

While Ocean Drive looms as the choice, Maryland interest will be in Henry H. Hecht's The Pincher. A star hereabouts as a juvenile, The Pincher went down to a surprise defeat in The Farrell Handicap at Bowie after working sensationally. With that race under his girth, his fans expect bigger things.

In addition to the aforementioned horses, the field will include: Brookmeade Stable's Full Speed, Crispin Oglebay's Noble Impulse; C. Mahlon Kline's Slam Bang, Mort Stuart's Best Doings, Walter M. Jeffords' Warmonger, Mrs. S. C. Clark, jr.'s Roman Way, Mrs. E. H. Ellison, jr.'s Sun Bahram, A. T. Hurff's Mirthmaker, Rarco Stable's Bull, and William G. Helis' Danherst.

With the exception of Danherst, all are eligible for the Chesapeake Stakes to be run on Saturday.

The Graw meeting runs for 21 days and hopes to make up for some of the skimpy days of last year. A shuffling of the Maryland dates was necessary to give the track the advantage of little or no opposition from nearby New Jersey tracks.

The three weeks of racing at the banks of the Susquehanna River will be the only show there for the year, the remaining four days of the Graw having been tacked on the Pimlico fall meeting at the Baltimore track.

Posttime for the first race is 2:15 p. m., with the daily double, as usual, on the first and second events.

MASTERS—From Pg. 16

Sam Snead Wins Title

he began the second nine, Snead's most loyal supporters were wondering if he would go to pieces again as he did on the final hole in the National Open at Philadelphia in 1939 when he took a disastrous 8.

Sammy's anwer was a birdie 2 on the toughest par 3 on the course, the 155-yard twelfth hole, with the pin set in back of a trap on a green not 15 feet wide at that point.

When he also birdied the thirteenth, a par 5 of 480 yards, he had left no doubt about his ability to shake off a couple of bad holes.

He picked up another bird at the 485-yard fiifteenth and his victory looked promising then for he had passed Mangrum, already in the clubhouse with a 70 for his 285.

Bulla Flubs on No. 14

Bulla was one of seven closely bunched players from 214 to 216 when the day's play began; Palmer 214. Mangrum, Snead and Joe Kirkwood, jr., at 215, and Bulla, Joe Turnesa and Jim Ferrier, transplanted Australian, at 216.

Bulla went out in 34, two under par, and played the first four holes on the back side in one under par. At that juncture, he was only one shot behind Snead.

Five in 12th Licks Palmer

Palmer landed in the ditch in front of the green and took a 5.

Turnesa, who played around with Snead and hung on stubbornly despite the fact that the galloping gallery acted as if he wasn't on the course, also beat himself on the 12.

Young Kirkwood, a Hollywood movie actor in the role of Joe Palooka of the comic strip, went up to a 75 on the final round for 290 while Ferrier could do no better than 79 for 295.

Snead's victory today was worth $2500, boosting him close to the top in earnings on the tournament circuit. He was fifth in the last published figures, with $6,360.

Mangrum, leading overall pro last year and top man on the corcuit in the April 1 listings, shared with Bulla the second and third place money, $1100 apiece. Palmer and Turnesa each picked up $440, and Worsham $330.

His best previous Masters try was in 1939 when he finished second with 280 to Ralph Guldahl's record-breaking 279. The record still holds although Claude Harmon tied it last year.

Snead has finished in the first 20 of the Masters in the last 9 tournaments before this one.

W. Va. Inaugural Has Nine Sprinters

Charles Town, W. Va., April 10. Nine sprinters of better than average ability will clash in the Inaugural Purse, featuring tomorrow's opening day program of the Charles Town Jockey Club. The card is the first of 22 sessions comprising the first of three spring and summer meetings here destined to carry the sport into mid-July.

E. P. Price's Virginia Beach and Mrs. H. S. Grinder's Country Dude share top weight of 112 pounds in the Inaugural, a test of 6½ furlongs for 3-year-olds and up. Others in the lineup for the $1500 purse are: E. L. Poston's White Easter, W. M. Mossey's Frisky Al, J. P. Harris' Blue April, H. J. Jones' Grecian Breeze, S. M. Follin's Erato, C. L. Kronfeld's Markless (coupled with Country Dude), and Mrs. G. O. Russell's Under Cover.

White Easter and Virginia Beach are likely to vie for favoritism in the day's spotlighted affair. Both have worked well but will have to be sharp, as Erato, Markless and Country Dude all showed speed in Maryland this spring.

First Date Conflict in Years

The meeting will mark the first time Charles Town has bucked a Maryland track since it was successful some years ago against Hagerstown. This time the West Virginia Panhandle oval takes on its first Maryland major track opposition in Havre de Grace. However, officials are confident that the session will be popular and profitable.

Post time for the first race is 1:30 p. m. with the daily double on the first and second races. A special B and O train leaves Washington at 11:45 a. m., Silver Spring at 11:45 and Rockville at 11:55, returning 20 minutes after the last race.

Confident of Luring Fans

Charles Town believes it can steer much of Washington's motorist fans its way due to the 52-mile trip from the District Line on the Virginia side of the Potomac, through Tyson's Corner, Leesburg and Hillsboro.

Here's the list of racing officials for the meeting: chief steward, Andrew R. Winters; stewards, Capt. Ewart Johnson, John P. Turner sr.; racing secretary, Fred Burton; assistant racing secretary, Greg Johnson; placing judges, A. A. Baldwin, Dulaney Randolph, E. A. Stone; patrol judges, Roy Gordon, Tom Cropper, George Rose; starter, Harold Holland; clerk of scales, J. V. Pons; director of wagering, E. H. Tuckwiller.

Ray Haight on Air

Turner's Lists Four 8-Rounders

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez will give eight young and willing fighters a chance to win places in his plans for the outdoor season, tonight at Turner's Arena.

Four eight-round scraps are on the card.

Al Wright and Julian Keene, keen local middleweight rivals, will get a lot of attention. Wright proved last summer that he can be a good fighter when he beat Smuggy Hursey in the role of a decided underdog. Keene, too, is a promising youngster having recently beaten Eddie Wilson easily and also owning victories over Art Bethea and Kid Wolfe.

Art Llanos, Puerto Rican featherweight, will tangle with Jimmy Watkins, former New York Golden Gloves titleholder. Llanos had built up an impressive win streak before being stopped by Jimmy Cooper and has since returned with a win over Lou Yonkers.

Herbie Biff Jones, Southeast southpaw, will seek his fifth straight win when he meets Baltimore's Johnny Castor and Holly Mims will meet Sonny Boy Bunn in a return match. Mims won a close decision earlier in the year and the rematch promises to be a hot slugfest.

Local fans will pass judgment on the "head protectors" when the contestants in one of the main bouts wear them. The National Boxing Association recently approved the protectors and suggested that they be used on a trial basis.

Robinson Packs 'Em in At Atlanta

Atlanta, April 10 (AP).—They hung from the rafters at Ponce de Leon Park today as a rootin' tootin' crowd of 25,221 set a new Atlanta record to see the home town Crackers drub Brooklyn, 8-4.

More than half of the throng, 13,885 to be exact, were Negroes who came to watch Jackie Robinson, the Dodgers' Negro second baseman, do his stuff.

The Negroes overflowed the special bleachers in left and center and stood about 10 deep all around the field. Each of the four tiers of the right field fence harbored its quota of standees. Some brought lunch and made a picnic of it under the shade trees on the slope in deep center field.

The terrific crowd in a park seating only 14,500 erased a record set opening day of last year—21,812.

For the three games in Atlanta, where the Ku Klux Klan had threatened to stop the Dodgers' two Negroes from playing, the paid attendance was 49,299. This was a new series record for Atlanta.

The Dodgers took home a bundle of cash but little else. They looked bad in losing to the Crackers for the second day in a row. Brooklyn pitching was tapped for 12 hits, 10 in the first four innings when Atlanta blasted Carl Erskine, Willard Ramsdell and Jack Banta for all of their runs.

200 Information Clerks to Lose Jobs In Defense Merger

SHAKE-DOWN: The merger of all Army, Navy, and Air Force public information personnel under the Defense Secretary eventually will wipe out about 200 jobs. The three military forces have been limited to 15 information employes each to maintain a liaison with their field officers and activities.

BIG JOB: Now that the Hoover Commission is about to complete its studies, it's a good bet that James Rowe, a commission member, will be offered a top Federal job. Rowe is reported to have support for a key post in either the State or Defense departments, or to fill the vacancy on the Atomic Energy Commission. He'd be an asset wherever he goes.

STEPHEN J. SPRINGARN, assistant general counsel of the Treasury, is the newest speechwriter for the President. He has transferred to the White House staff to be an assistant to Clark Clifford. Spingarn is said to be working on civil rights speeches and legislation.

Assistant State Secretary Jack E. Peurifoy is reported to have rejected suggestions that he transfer to National Defense to be an Assistant Secretary.

FHA: A few years ago there was an annual battle in Congress over the appropriation for the then Farm Security Agency which was investigated regularly by half a dozen committees. That was before Dillard B. Lasseter took over and FSA changed its name to Farmers Home Administration.

Now FHA is praised by Democrats and Republicans alike. Lasseter is credited with replacing the FSA "dreamers" with practical farm folks, and of operating the agency efficiently.

AFL's Federal worker unions have an answer to the threat of Social Security for some 300,000 temporary Government people. They are sponsoring a bill which would (1) bring the temporaries under the Civil Service retirement system, and (2) provide survivorship benefits for the family of any employe who had a minimum of a year of service. In other words, the AFL unions are trying to beat Social Security at it its own game.

I & N: Attorney General Tom C. Clark is most unhappy with the operations of his Immigration and Naturalization Service. He has told Congressional committees:

"I am disturbed about the present administrative efficiency of the service . . . We are going to have to take some drastic steps because we cannot permit the situation to continue as it is . . . I told them (I & N officials) that I would spend one day a week with them. I am going to see that things are straightened out?

Clark said that some of the top I & N field executives had been in the service for a long time and had reached the retirement age. "We should replace them," he said, "with younger executives who can bring in new ideas and more effective techniques."

The Attorney General admitted that the agency had one good alibi for falling so far behind in its work. The headquarters of I & N was moved back here from Philadelphia a year ago. In the process the agency lost 60 per cent of its employes, more than 500 of them.

Also, the Civil Service Commission fell flat on its face in trying to fill the agency's personnel needs. Not long ago I & N had more than 800 vacancies on its staff. Congress gave the agency funds to hire an emergency staff of border patrolmen, but it has taken Civil Service more than 18 months to okay people for the jobs.

NPS: Employes of the National Park Service work from 8:45 a. m. to 5:15 p. m., the only agency in the Interior Department to have those hours. Its employes are petitioning the department to poll the agency to determine whether they want to continue present hours, or work the 7:45 a. m. to 4:15 p. m. schedule of other Interior agencies.

LETTER: "What about overtime pay for girls who are ordered to work all hours of the day and night at the State Department. We are told that it's our duty to stay at nights after our bosses go home—and frequently it's an hour or more longer. We are told we can't be given compensatory time off or overtime pay because our overtime work isn't authorized in writing. We have been threatened with the loss of our jobs if we complain to Civil Service."

Auto Kills Pedestrian Near Home In Fairfax

7 Persons Injured In Rockville Pike Collision; Woman Spectator Faints

A 45-year-old pedestrian was killed instantly yesterday after being struck by an auto at Duke and Belvoir sts., a few feet outside Alexandria, in Fairfax County.

Police identified the victim as Paul R. Battle, of 164 Belvoir st. He was reported struck as he crossed the intersection near his home at about 7:45 p. m. He was pronounced dead at the scene.

The car, police said, was driven by Addison Beckham, 56, of 205 N. West st., Alexandria. Police said Battle was knocked more than 20 feet along the street.

Duke st. forms the boundary between Alexandria and Fairfax County.

Battle, a World War II veteran, recently was released from the veterans hospital at Perry Point, Md.

To Appear Friday

Beckham was charged with reckless driving by Fairfax County Police Officer Hillary Jenkins and will appear in court Friday.

Seven persons were injured, one critically, in a head-on collision about 5:30 p. m. yesterday at Rockville Pike near Garrett Park rd.

The critically injured person was Judy Fleck, 17, Youngwood, Pa., who was reported to have suffered a possible fractured skull, reptured right ear drum and lacerations.

Other injured, all of whom were taken to Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, by the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad, are:

Robert Peoples, 18, Youngwood, lacerations on forehead.

Miss Catherine Hall, 50, 2022 Columbia rd. nw., lacerated chin.

Myron Hay, 20, Youngwood, lacerations.

Miss Frances Pahel, 19, Youngwood, abrasions on forehead.

Charlotte Kramp, 45, 3220 Connecticut ave. nw., possible fracture of hip and lacerations on face.

Woman Faints at Scene

Peoples, the driver of the Pennsylvania car, told police another car sideswiped his car forcing him into the oncoming vehicle, driven by Charlotte Krampe.

Neither driver has been charged, police said.

Traffic on the Rockville Pike was jammed for 5 miles toward Rockville and for several miles toward Bethesda. Five Montgomery County police patrol cars and one motorcycle patrol worked more than two hours to straighten out traffic.

Four Hurt Near Clinton

Three adults and a small girl were injured in another head-on automobile collision on Route 5 near Clinton, Md., at about 7:30 p. m.

According to Upper Marlboro police, Jesse Blackwell, 39, of 20 47th st. se., his wife Leona, 28, and Violet Moore, 12, of Brandywine, Md., were injured when their auto collided with a car driven by Leonard Early, 40, of Brandywine.

At Casualty Hospital, where the four were taken in ambulances of the Marlboro Rescue Squad, Blackwell and his wife were treated for lacerations and bruises and admitted in undetermined condition. Violet was treated for cuts and bruises and was expected to be released last night. Early was said to be suffering from possible head injuries.

George V. Allen Says U. S. Can't Permit 'Holdup'

The United States cannot sit by idly and see any independent nation "held up at the point of a gun and its natural resources taken away," George V. Allen, Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs, said last night.

Allen spoke at the Sligo Seventh Day Adventist Church in Takoma Park, Md., at the closing session of the 100th anniversary celebration of the Review and Herald, Seventh Day Adventist publication.

Speaking of policy in Germany, he said rather than trying to orient Germany to the West, it should try to integrate that nation into Europe and make its 65 million inhabitants feel like Europeans.

Florida Pair Wins Debate Tournament

Two University of Florida students last night won the Georgetown University Invitational Debating Tournament in which teams from 15 colleges and universities tangled with pros and cons for the last three days.

Taking the negative, Walter Apfelbaum, 18, and Jordan Bittel, 20, wrested a close victory from W. Jerry Roberts, 31, and Charles Harvey, 28, a University of Richmond team that upheld the affirmative in a much-explored subject:

"Resolved: That the Federal Government should adopt a policy of equalizing educational opportunity in tax-supported schools by means of annual grants."

When the Richmond and Florida teams took up the subject last night it was the 113th hour of actual debate on the subject at Georegtown.

An estimated 5,424,000 words

Apfelbaum

Bittel

were expended by the orators in exploring the subject, tournament officials estimated.

But of the old-fashioned, wild waving of arms there was none last night. "Audiences are more sophisticated than they used to be," one debater said afterward.

Words flowed rapidly and evenly, however, and at least one veteran listener, the Rev. Eugene B. Gallagher, S. J., director of the Philodemic and Edmund Campion Debating Societies' activities at Georgetown, confessed after the first million words or so that he was "dazed."

To Apfelbaum from Miami and a junior at the University of Florida, and his teammate, Bittel, of Miami Beach, a senior, the John J. Toohey, S. J., challenge trophy was presented. The university will have to defend the trophy a year from now in the second annual Georgetown debating tournament.

To Roberts, Harvey, Apfelbaum and Bittel were presented sterling silver gavel pins.

Roberts, Harvey and Bittel together with Richard Gordon, 21, of Georgetown's Philodemic Society team, on the basis of a point system, were named the four individual champion debaters. Gordon, a junior at Georgetown, lives at 1383 Bryant st. ne.

The tournament trophy is named in honor of the Rev. Father Toohey, 76, veteran Georgetown debate coach who coached Philodemic teams through 17 undefeated seasons, 1921 to 1939.

Judges for the final debate were Philip J. Perlman, Solicitor General of the United States, Bolitha J. Laws, Chief Justice of the United States District Court for the District, and Joseph R. Jackson, Associate Judge of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals.

3 Men Seized At Richmond In Cab Holdup

Three men suspected of forcing a Washington cab driver to take them to Richmond, Va., Friday and then robbing him have been arrested in Richmond.

Fairfax County police said two Richmond men, aged 18 and 25, were arrested by Richmond police early yesterday on information given by a third suspect who was picked up there Saturday. He was identified as a 31-year-old Fort Belvoir soldier.

Because the hold-up occurred in Fairfax County, near Fort Belvoir, the suspects were to be turned over to Fairfax police. Lieut. Grafton L. Wells, county detective chief, said they will be charged with armed robbery.

Cab Driver Walter A. Hutcherson, jr., 5614 1st st. nw., told county police three men hailed his cab at 13th and E sts. nw., Friday afternoon and asked to be taken to Fort Belvoir.

As they neared the fort, Hutcherson said, one of the men drew a gun and ordered him to drive to Richmond. There the trio took his money, $6.00 and let him go. Hutcherson said they considered taking his cab, but that he talked them out of the idea with the warning that they could easily be spotted with a stolen car.

D. C. Pushes New Bill on Tipsy Driving

Commissioners Ask Law Giving Weight To Alcohol Tests Of Blood, Urine

An increase in the number of successful prosecutions of drunken drivers in the District is expected if Congress enacts a proposed bill affecting trial on such charges.

The District Commissioners have asked the Senate District Committee to introduce a bill "to provide for weight to be given to evidence of tests of alcohol in the blood, urine or breath of persons tried in the District for certain offenses committed while operating vehicles."

At present, about half of the cases involving drunken driving which go to trial are lost because competent medical testimony is not available to interpret the significance of the tests, according to Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark F. King.

King, a firm backer of the bill, said there are two to three drunken driving cases a day in the criminal prosecution section at Municipal Court. Under present conditions, a driver stands a 50-50 chance of escaping penalty in court because Dr. Oscar B. Hunter, a physician who testifies in such cases without fee, may not be able to be in court, King said.

The proposed bill would provide that courts take judicial notice of the test results without the medical interpretation, with a .15 percentage of alcohol in a person's system indicating intoxication.

In previous sessions, the Commissioners have asked unsuccessfully for a bill requiring compulsory tests for drivers suspected by police of being intoxicated.

King says the compulsory feature is not now necessary. Only five persons of more than 2000 tested during the past three years have refused to take the test, he added. The tests are usually made on urine samples taken at police precinct houses shortly after the suspects are contacted by policemen. The Health Department analyzes the specimens, notifying King of the results. He prosecutes those cases where the analysis shows more than .15 per cent alcohol in the system.

Cab Driver Held Up Near White House

Alexandria Hacker Says Soldier Got His Wallet and $25

An Alexandria cab driver was held up and robbed of $25 last night by a passenger he was driving into the District.

Thomas Patterson, 33, of 127 Harvard st., Alexandria, told police he picked up a soldier at Duke st. in Alexandria at 8:30 p. m. The fare asked to be driven to Washington.

Patterson told police that as they crossed Highway Bridge, the soldier said suddenly. "Don't turn around and don't stop. I've got a gun and I'll shoot you. Give me your money."

Patterson said he started to turn around and the soldier jabbed him in the back repeating, "I'll shoot you." He handed his billfold back to the bandit, he said.

When they got to 17th and E sts. nw., his passenger jumped out of the cab and ran in the direction of the White House. He drove to Emergency Hospital and called police.

Theft Suspect Caught By Woman in Trolley

An 18-year-old youth was charged with robbery and carrying a deadly weapon yesterday after he landed right in the arms of a policeman upon boarding a streetcar while allegedly fleeing with a woman's wallet.

Police identified the youth as Samuel Chester Saunders, 18, of 400 Eastern ave. ne., and said he was identified in two other recent robberies of the same type.

Saunders was arrested on a streetcar at 7th and F sts. nw. Saturday afternoon by Pvt. G. M. Nelson, Seventh Precinct. Police said the youth boarded the streetcar, immediately after leaving a streetcar right ahead of it, where he had taken a wallet from the righthand coat pocket of Mrs. Grace L. Barrois, 423 Hobart pl. nw.

Mrs. Barrois followed him off the first streetcar and into the second, where she told Policeman Nelson of her suspicions. As Nelson questioned Saunders, Mrs. Barrois' wallet, which contained 23, dropped to the floor, police said. A switchblade knife was found in Saunders' possession when he was searched, police said.

Saunders was identified at a police lineup yesterday as the youth who snatched a wallet, containing $72, from John Anderson, 57, of 2153 California st. nw., on March 21, and a pocketbook containing $170, from Trina Osorio, 19, of 1468 Harvard st. nw., on March 28.

Police reported yesterday that two men stabbed and robbed Edward Bowles, 36, of 5062 Just st. ne. The holdup, which netted $123, occurred about 1:15 a. m. while Bowles was standing at Georgia ave. and Gresham pl. nw. Bowles was reported in fair condition at Freedmen's Hospital with a stomach wound.

Thousands Lured Outdoors By Bright Spring Sunday

A sprinkling of spring bonnets at Palm Sunday services, picknickers along Memorial Highway, bipeds gazing at quadrapeds in the Zoo . . . these were among Washington's reactions yesterday to a lovely April Sunday.

The weatherman termed it only a "normal April 10." After all, he reasoned, the warmest it got was 63, only a couple of degrees above normal. The day's low of 39 was equally regulation, he noted.

Other Palm Sundays

It was like the Palm Sunday of 1942 when 18 inches of snow on Washington's streets mocked the calendar, or last year's Palm Sunday which was observed in sultry 86-degree heat.

Police at the Zoo counted about 60,000 visitors. More than 1000 persons inspected the flowers at Dumbarton Oaks in the three hours the gardens were opened.

Clothes were down to a bathing-beach minimum in the picnic areas on the Mount Vernon Highway south of Alexandria.

Easy Day for Police

Park police, about the only people who suffer on beautiful Sundays, happily reported an unusually light day's work. With the Tidal Basin cherry blossoms just about gone, and those at Hains Point still to come, traffic in the downtown park areas was no problem, they said.

Most popular flowers in town were the deep pink crabapple blooms in Anacostia Park, police said.

An estimated 1500 to 2000 persons traveled out to see the Woodlawn estate, George Washington's wedding gift to Nellie Custis, which was opened to the public for the first time yesterday.

Located on Route 1 near Mount Vernon, the 127-acre estate proved an attraction lure to sightseers although the Georgian mansion still is unfurnished.

Educator Calls Lincoln Greatest Friend of South

Dr. Robert L. Kincaid, president of Lincoln Memorial University, Harrogate, Tenn., yesterday declared that the "South had no greater friend" than Abraham Lincoln.

Dr. Kincaid spoke at the observance of the 84th anniversary of Lincoln's assassiaation in Ford's Theater.

Said Dr. Kincaid: "If only the South could have taken Lincoln as their leader, rather than rejecting his earnest efforts to appease and compromise on the basis of his convictions, which history has proved to be right and just, we could have avoided the awful holocaust which set our nation back for half a century."

'King of Kings' To Be Screened Here This Week

D. C. Seafood Cheaper Than A Year Ago

Washington fish dealers are beginning their biggest week of the year offering lower prices than last year on most items.

Though the Christian Holy Week and Jewish Passover occur this week, seafood prices have not risen to last year's levels, although they are higher than last week.

At Thompson's Sea Food Stores at the New Center Market and 3306 11th st. nw., shad sold Saturday for 60 cents a pound, compared with 75 cents the Saturday before Palm Sunday in 1948. Sea bass was 35 cents, compared with 45 cents a year ago. Oysters at 70 to 80 cents a pint were about 10 cents below last year. Filet of haddock 45 cents a pound, against 50 cents a year ago.

As an indication of how the holiday demand has sent up prices, Bishop Thompson, manager of the market, said that last week the wholesale price of rockfish was 15 cents a pound, while yesterday wholesalers were asking 35 cents.

On the wholesale market, select oysters were bringing from $3 to $3.50 a gallon, from $1 to $1.50 under a year ago.

Shrimp is about the only seafood that remains at last year's high level, around 90 cents a pound. Crabmeat is still high, but dealers expect a much lower price when the season opens late in May.

6 Washington Men Receive Fellowships

Appointment of six Washington men to John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Fellowships was announced yesterday by the foundation.

Those named include Robert S. Allen, journalist and former co-author with Drew Pearson of the Washington Merry-Go-Round column; Duncan Emrich, chief of the Library of Congress folklore section; Charles Maurice Wiltse, consultant on industrial mobilization with the National Security Resources Board.

Also, James C. LaDriere, associate professor of English at Catholic University; George McC. Foster, jr., director of the Institute of Social Anthropology, Smithsonian Institution, and Robert W. Frase, social science analyst with the Department of Commerce.

Frase received a Guggenheim Fellowship award last year for his continued study of proposals for the international control of atomic energy.

Foster's project is studying a contemporary community in southern Spain, while LaDriere is working on a study of English prosody.

Wiltse will work on the third volume of his three-volume biography of John C. Calhoun. Emrich's project is the preparation of a guide to the folklore of the Western States exclusive of the Pacific Coast.

Allen, who edited "Our Fair City," a collection of studies of various American cities published in 1947, will make a study of the operation of State government in the United States.

Sermon Series Listed

The Rev. George E. Schnabel, pastor of Albright Memorial Church, Fourth and Rittenhouse sts. nw., will give a series of sermons on "The Drama of Redemption" today through Friday at 7:45 p. m.

Palm Sunday Worshipers Throng to Churches

Extra Services Held To Accommodate Big Congregations as Holy Week Begins

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

Thousands of worshipers yesterday attended Palm Sunday services at Protestant and Roman Catholic Churches in Greater Washington.

Some churches scheduled two services to take care of the crowds. At others, part of the congregations heard sermons over public address systems in overflow rooms.

Traditional palms were distributed at Episcopal and Catholic and at some Lutheran and Methodist services. In Catholic churches the story of Christ's passion was read at masses.

Palm Sunday marks the opening of Holy Week. During the week there will be special services, with holy communion on Maundy Thursday and solemn three-hour rites on Good Friday.

At Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 900 Massachusetts ave. nw., John W. Rustin pictured Jesus' triumphal entry into Jerusalem. If He came to Washington today, Dr. Rustin said, He would see the beauty of the city, but also much that is corrupt.

Dr. Rustin spoke of "Christian ministers that have ceased to be prophetic, Christian leaders who no longer agonize over the tragedies enacted each day around them . . . corruption in high places. . . . gambling which thrives under the very eyes of the police . . . jealousies that exist between law enforcement officers . . . increased taxes and less protection."

If Jesus cried out as he looked on Jerusalem, Dr. Rustin asked, "what should He cry out after He looked down on our city and saw how little children suffer because of the crimes of their elders, and how the pure are corrupted by the corruption that permeates our very society?"

Palm Sunday symbolizes the supreme drama of history, Dr. Seth R. Brooks said at Universalist National Memorial Church, 16th and S sts. nw. "It is the conflict between the prophet who shows men the world not as it is but as it can be transformed, and those who see life only as it is," he said.

"Jesus, the prophet, was defeated but his ideals refuse to die. The multitude, not ready for the ideal, is ever impelled toward it because the vision given by the prophet is the most persuasive power working in man," Dr. Brooks said.

'Kingliness of Soul'

It was in the divine order that for at least one day Jesus should be proclaimed for what He was, Dr. Edward L. R. Elson told the congregation at National Presbyterian Church, Connecticut ave. and N st. nw. "His greatness was in the kingliness of his Soul, the spiritual splendor of His nature and the divine glory of His personality," he said.

"He has no human ideal, no plan, no program, no blueprint. The ideal and the real knew no distinction in Him, the message and the man were one. The greatness of our Lord is in the quality of His being."

At Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, nw., Dr. L. Ralph Tabor gave the last in a series of Lenten mediations entitled "I Remember Him." Dr. Tabor interpreted the experiences of persons associated with Jesus in the days before the crucifixion.

He suggested that Simon of Cyrene remembered Jesus by the understanding of Calvary's cross. "I remember the weight of the cross on my shoulder; and the weight of the cross which replaced the song of the pilgrim to Jerusalem in my life. The lesson of the cross that day caused me to know that the follower of Jesus is no actor in an imagined drama but a partner in the mighty, divine plan which takes hold of a man unexpectedly," he said.

Volunteer Fireman Alfred R. Tolson of Clinton, Md., took a personal interest in one fire alarm yesterday. It was his own home.

Tolson was working in the Clinton volunteer fire department about 11:30 a. m. when the call was telephoned in.

He responded with other members of the department and with firemen from the Morningside, Silver Hill and Forestville departments.

Tolson's father first saw the flames and called the fire board at Capitol Heights, which relayed the call to Clinton firehouse.

Bar Meets Wednesday

The Bar Association of the District of Columbia has postponed its regular meeting from Tuesday to Wednesday, it was announced yesterday. The meeting will be held in the Mayflower Hotel's Sapphire Room.

Butter Price Dip To Block Oleo Bill, Aiken Says

Senator Aiken (R., Vt.) predicted yesterday that the decline of butter prices will block Senate passage of any oleomargarine tax repeal bill which also permits interstate shipment of the colored product.

The House already has approved that kind of a bill.

Aiken is a sponsor of a substitute measure which would junk the Federal levies on oleomargarine, but prohibit shipment of colored oleo across State lines. Twenty-six farm and dairy State Senators are backing that bill.

The Senate Finance Committee is conducting public hearings on both the substitute and the House bill. The hearings will continue through Wednesday.

After Escape

Road Gangs Defended In Virginia

Despite occasional escapes, road gangs have proved successful in rehabilitating convicts and making them pay their debt to society, Rice M. Youell, Virginia superintendent of corrections, said yesterday.

On the heels of the escape and recapture of two prisoners from a Fairfax road gang last week, Youell explained yesterday how the system operates.

Like most Southern States, he said, Virginia puts many of its less dangerous prisoners to work maintaining the State road system. Lifers are kept in the penitentiary at Richmond. Others, including those physically handicapped, work on the three prison farms.

Camps in Northern Area

Northern Virginia's only contact with this system is with the three road camps located in this section, at Woodridge, Newmarket and near Fairfax.

The 2000 men at the approximately 30 road camps over the State are supervised and selected, he said, as follows:

A new prisoner goes before a classification committee, which includes a doctor, psychiatrist, psychologist. If it decides he can be handled in the relative freedom of a road camp, he is sent off to one.

There, after a period of close observation, he may become a trusty. A trusty has considerably more freedom than other prisoners. He may work in the camp kitchen, on the roads, he may direct traffic at one end of a construction job 100 yards or more away from the armed guard who hovers over the main body of workers.

Nearly 50 per cent of the prisoners become trusties, Youell said, and they account for most of the escapes, which average not more than 100 a year. Most fugitives are recaptured almost immediately, he said.

At Camp 30 near Fairfax, where the two convicts escaped last Wednesday, four prisoners have escape since last June. All were recaptured. The two who got away Wednesday were caught Saturday near Fort Royal, Virginia.

Lane Paroles Six

Two Maryland youths, committed to State penal institutions by the Prince Georges County Circuit Court, were paroled yesterday by Governor William Preston Lane, jr. The two — among six convicts —were released by the Governor.

The youths were: Robert Lee Moore, 17, convicted of breaking into a store, who had served 18 months of a maximum three-year sentence; and Joseph Rudolph Tutz, jr., 20, convicted of manslaughter by automobile, and sentenced to not over three years in the State Reformatory for Males.

French Cookery Classes Begin

By Lucia Brown

If you'd like to give your meals a touch of French distinction that will lift them out of the realm of the commonplace, the YWCA has the very course for you, starting April 18.

It will be taught by Mme. Irene Beran, a graduate of what is probably the most famous cooking school in the world, the Cordon Bleu in Paris. The vivacious little French woman has recently moved to Washington with her husband and will give a day and evening series of five lessons each, in French and European cookery at the Y.

Her devotion to things culinary dates all the way back to girlhood days in Paris.

"I liked to eat so much then," she laughs. "I got my mother and our cooks to teach me all their recipes. Cooking was my hobby."

Later on, when war clouds and less prosperous times came to France, she decided to make it her profession too, attended the Cordon Bleu, directed by the great Pellepret at 129 Faubourg Saint-Honore, Paris.

In her course here at the Y, both "simple and elegant dishes" will be included, says Mme. Irene.

All classes will be held on the sixth floor of the YWCA at 17th and K sts. The evening classes, starting April 18, will begin at 6 p. m., end at 8:30 p. m. Daylight classes will start April 21 and be held from 10 a. m. to 12:30 p. m.

Because Mme. Irene took first prize in a class of 265 for sweets and cheese dishes at the Cordon Bleu, we begged her to give us one of her dessert recipes for our readers. She responded graciously with the following recipe for "Gateau aux Noix," or nut cake:

GATEAU AUX NOIX
(Nut Cake)

Work ½ cup sweet butter until it is soft. Add slowly 1¼ cups of powdered sifted sugar. Work again very well. Add 5 small eggs (or 4 large ones), one at a time, beating well with wooden spoon after each egg. Add ½ cup finely chopped peeled almonds and 2/3 cup chopped walnut meats. Add a little good rum (½ to 1 teaspoon) At the very last, fold in ½ cup well-sifted pastry flour. Bake at 350 degrees in greased and floured mold for approximately 50 to 60 minutes. (Or, to make turning cake out easier, line greased pan with circle of waxed paper, then grease paper). When cake is done, cut in two parts through the center, thus making two layers. Fill the center and cover the cake with the following:

2 egg yolks.
4 tablespoons sweet butter.
½ teaspoon dark rum.

Work walnuts and powdered sugar together; beat in two egg yolks and the butter, which has been worked until it is soft. Add the rum, then spread on cake.

Unable to Induce European Sweetheart to Be His Wife, Man Comes Home, Marries Suddenly, Then the Girl Emigrates Here and He's Racked

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In 1945, at the close of the war, I was in Europe, and was assigned to the military government as an interpreter. There I met Martha, then 19, one of Europe's unfortunate "displaced persons." She was absolutely alone in the world, our jobs brought us together, and for three months we were constant companions.

I soon realized that I loved her, and she professed love for me, but I couldn't induce her to marry me, not even when I was ordered home. She said if she married me then, some day I might think she had used me to get passage out of the country; but she asked for my home address and said that we would meet again; and then, and only then, could we be married.

A year passed with no word from her and all my letters were returned unclaimed. Then I married Jean, a girl I had recently met. I believed I loved her and I knew she loved me, but our marriage wasn't happy. We stayed together, but I sensed I didn't love her; and shortly after our second anniversary I got a letter from Martha, who had finally made her way to Canada.

He Feels 'Lost' After Reunion

MARTHA TOOK into account that I might be married now and merely expressed a desire to see me again. When I answered her letter I didn't tell her I was married, and after seven months I managed a trip "to see an old friend." It was a matter of minutes after we met before all my old love for Martha came rushing back. I knew then why my marriage wasn't a success; and without hesitation I told Martha what had happened in the intervening years.

Martha said the decision was mine to make; I must decide the future course of my life. But I am lost; I have no idea what to do. Should I ask Jean for a divorce, as my heart suggests? Or should I stay with her and devote my life to her welfare, even though I do not love her? I am en route home as I write this; and I must have disinterested advice.

E. G.

A Victim of Corn, Continental Style

DEAR E. G.: Inside truth of Martha's pedestal-pose is that she didn't accept you four years ago when the offer was open, for the simple reason that she didn't want you as a husband, although the idea of using you to get out of the country was tempting.

She found your devotion valuable and your largesse a luxury in the bleak European situation, no doubt; but you didn't appeal as a life companion. She figured there must be some other, less tiresome way of solving her problems than catering to your infatuation; and, having reached that decision, she turned you down.

But in doing so, she deftly earmarked you for future reference, in case of emergency, with her theatrical speech about meeting again some day, then to be married, fate willing, maybe. This was pure corn, continental style,—and after she filed the address, I daresay she forgot you, more or less, until she reached Canada and began to explore the new terrain.

Girl's Pedestal Pose Is Phony

HER LETTER was an adroit come-on, regardless of the circumstances in which it found you, and your response has been a mixture of heel and sucker. Martha's line that you must decide the future course of your life is more expedient corn. She still doesn't know if she wants you or not, or if possibly she can do better; but by implication she gives you carte blanche to discard Jean and come back courting if you wish.

If Martha were as full of honor as she pretends, she would have taken the decision out of your hands, rather than let you go in headless-tailless distraction of mind. She would have said, in effect, "You are married and that's that. If you aren't happy, that is a matter between you and your wife. I missed the boat, so count me out; and no more crying over might-have-beens."

Since she wasn't big enough, good enough or honest enough for that, my advice is to spill the whole story to Jean and let her lead. She may act promptly to set you free; but think carefully!—is that what you'd want in the final analysis? I rather doubt it. I believe you're poor husband-material in any case; and that Jean at least will deal openly in trying to help you grow, whereas Martha's technique is to dope you with "charm" and make cynical use of you.

Visiting Overnight

How children do enjoy staying overnight at a friend's home! There's a kind of adventure at being away from home that is very satisfying at eight, nine or ten. Even though Jimmy's house is only down the block, there's a newness about the way things go on there that's exciting.

Sometimes, we parents are a bit reluctant at permitting our children to stay away overnight. Perhaps we feel that they will grow away from us too soon. We may think that the Browns or the Joneses can't possibly know how to take really good care of our children. Or there may be more specific worries about how much sleep the youngsters will get or the kind of food they will be given.

These are natural concerns when children are young. It is important, though, that we look at them critically and see whether the values in developing independence and self-confidence that may be started by such overnight visits do not outweigh the loss of a little sleep or the remote possibility that there may be a stomach upset caused by excitement and different food.

Eventually, all children need to feel comfortable at being away from home. Perhaps the overnight stay at a nearby friend's home is a most natural first step.

Do You Talk To Your Baby? You Should

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It is widely known that babies do not develop as well physically or mentally when they lack mothering.

Even in institutions where there are no mothers, the attendants make a point of spending some time each day cuddling and loving the little charges. Otherwise, they lie like lumps, their nutritional needs supplied but lacking that spark supplied by mother-love.

Mrs. M. J. A. wishes she might impress upon mothers the necessity to talk to their babies. "I began talking to my baby when he was new in the hospital," she writes, "then the very first time I took her to the doctor and he poked a tongue depresser in her mouth, I held her hands and said reassuringly. 'It's all right honey.' And she didnt cry.

"Later when she began to eat I'd tell her to chew and show her how and to this day she is a very careful chewer." These are but two examples but the point is that many parents neglect to talk to their babies and underestimate their intelligence.

There are mothers who write to ask me why their children do not talk. In their explanations they admit that they do not talk much themselves, they are alone in the house, or they are busy. This is why the child does not respond readily to demands to talk.

When my own babies were little I used to say each night as I closed the bedroom door, "Go to sleep, darling." I felt that this constant repetition, along with the feeling of sleepiness would soon become meaningful to them.

We read jingles to children when we know they are meaningless, but the child enjoys the rhythm, the repetition of sounds, the different sounds themselves. So it is with talking. We say the same thing in the same way in a given situation and soon the child understands.

Ask Anne

I have a neckpiece of white fur, probably rabbit, that has become yellowed with age. Could you give me directions for bleaching it? Would a dry cleaning fluid injure the fur? I know it wouldn't whiten it, but it is also a little soiled. B. W.

There is no safe home method for bleaching fur. However, its appearance can probably be very much improved if you will wash it. Use a liquid shampoo soap, wet the fur, and rub the soap through it. Use a minimum of water and when thoroughly clean, pat with a towel to remove as much moisture as possible. Shake well and hang to dry where the air can circulate around the piece. Work between the hands occasionally during the drying to soften the pelt. Shake and brush well.

If, when the piece is clean, it still is too yellowed to be usable you can dye it a dark color by using a good hair dye. Follow directions on the product you buy. For the best results, dip fur into dye. Dry as described above.

Fur should not be dipped into dry cleaning fluids because they harden the skin, making it unpliable and brittle.

Remove all the present finish by using a good commercial paint and varnish remover. Follow the directions which come with the product you buy. When clean, bleach the piece by applying an oxalic acid solution made by dissolving two ounces of oxalic acid crystals in one pint of hot water. (Oxalic acid is poison, so use accordingly.) Apply oxalic acid with a brush or cloth and let stand 15 minutes, then wash with weak ammonia solution. Or, you can use a commercial wood bleach following the directions which come with the product you buy. Allow the wood to dry thoroughly and sand with the grain until satin smooth.

Now, you are ready for the finish. To see just what the color of the wood will be when finished without stain, give it a preliminary coat of oil. Mix one part of raw linseed oil and two parts turpentine Apply to wood in thin coat, rubbing off excess and letting stand overnight. If the color of the wood is not as you wish when dried, apply a penetrating stain in the color you wish. It probably will be necessary to experiment on an under side until you get the exact color. Let stand two days after staining until perfectly dry and shellac with a mixture of equal parts alcohol and high grade shellac. When dry (after a few hours) rub with steel wool or fine sandpaper and repeat applications of alcohol-shellac mixture until pores are filled. Wax with furniture wax.

Will you help me choose colors for walls, as I will be permitted to choose colors when I move from my present apartment to a larger one? I do not yet know the exposure. The living room has blond furniture and a few pieces in black lacquer. Colors so far are emerald green, Chinese red and chartreuse. I do not have curtains or a rug in this room yet, and would appreciate suggestions for those. All upholstery is in solid color. The children's room has maple beds and chests, shelves painted green, an orange and green tint, and a green rug. I want whatever is chosen for the walls, curtains and spreads to take away the "green" look. The other bedroom has a black headboard bed and desk; white spread and curtains; red string rugs and red lamp shades. As the Venetian blinds will not be painted and I feel the ivory will detract from a colored wall in the living room, do you think it would help to dye sheer glass curtains to match the wall? M. L.

Since you have vivid colors in your living room upholstery. I'd suggest using a soft gray or off-white for the walls. With this, you might choose boldly patterned drapes with Chinese red and chartreuse the predominating colors on a gray or white background. Because your upholstery and walls will be without figure, you have an excellent opportunity here to choose for your drapes one of the handsome colorful modern designs. The rug could be a gray—in a deeper shade if you choose gray for the walls—of a tone-on-tone design.

For the children's room, a soft yellow would be lovely for the walls. Use a deeper shade yellow for the spreads and curtains. Yellow goes beautifully with maple and would give a warm cast to the room.

In the other bedroom, you could introduce another color such as a soft blue or gray which would go well with the red accent. Or, you could have the walls a very light gray, almost white.

Yes, you could cover the blinds with glass curtains to match the living room wall, if you wish. However, unless you want glass curtains for their appearance rather than just to cover the blinds, I'd suggest you wait to purchase them until you have your drapes up. With the drapes between the blinds and the wall, you may not object to the color of the blinds.

Cooking Cues . . .

In roasting meat, rub it well with salt and freshly ground pepper before putting it in the oven. If desired, garlic salt may substitute for some of the plain salt. Paprika may also be added.

Creamed chicken or tuna fish for party service may be garnished with almonds that have been blanched and lightly toasted.

For a salad combination that's different, mix cooked peas (fresh, canned, or quick-frozen) with finely diced celery and mayonnaise or creamy salad dressing; serve on salad greens and garnish with finely shredded carrot.

A pound of fresh green peas will make two to three servings; a pound of fresh snap beans will serve four.

Plastic Spray Cuts Maintenance

Maintenance work is greatly reduced through the use of Plastic Coat, the clear, glossy, flexible finish that is applied by spraying to protect and enhance metal, wood, leather, paper and a wide variety of other surfaces. By merely pressing the noncorrosive Bakelite polyethylene spray on top of the container, it is possible to make a seemingly countless number of items resistant to water, alcohol, oil and grease, alkalies and other corrosive and tarnishing elements. Plastic Coat dries in about 2 minutes and is particularly useful in preventing tarnish and protecting the polish of brass, bronze and chrome in the home as well as in public places. It is an aid to housekeepers, auto and boat owners, jewelers, electricians, craftsmen, artists and draftsmen. Plastic Coat likewise provides a durable and protective coating for drawings, tracings, blueprints, maps and photographs. The spray can also be used outdoors for everything from lawn furniture to garden tools.

Word To The Guys

A Shorter Beltline—A Longer Lifeline

By Ida Jean Kain

The average man doesn't give a hoot about what happens to be the fashionable beltline for 1949—and that a waistline 5 to 6 inches less than the chest measure is stylish. What does concern him, however, is that a longer beltline means a shorter lifeline.

To get right down to cases . . . if your waist and chest measurements are equal, you're in bad shape, from every standpoint. And when the beltline exceeds the chest measure, you're headed for trouble.

But a corporation front is the penalty for excess fat, flabby muscles and gravity. The remedy is to stop eating to belt-bulging proportions, curtail spirited beverages, and exercise to put tone back in the muscles that brace the abdominal wall.

Before you tackle rugged calisthenics, however, drop into the doctor's office and get your heart and blood pressure checked. He may advise that you take it easy.

On the exercise score, there are a couple of old standbys which should be avoided. Skip the one in which you bend over to touch fingers to floor . . . it is contraindicated in high blood pressure, and no great shakes as an exercise anyway.

That other old-timer, lying flat on back and slowly raising and lowering legs, knees straight, is too great a strain for the average overweight. Furthermore, much of the work of that exercise is done by the muscles in the lower back instead of the middle muscles.

The safety exercise position is flat on back on floor with knees bent and soles of feet on floor. In that position there is a minimum of weight bearing, and no strain.

From the safety position, a number of exercises can be devised . . . merely pulling the small of the back into the floor and retracting the abdominal wall is a good starter. From there flex alternate knees to chest, making sure to put the emphasis on the frontline muscles, and keeping small of back against floor.

The second exercise works directly on the muscles that band the beltline . . .

Stand on knees, then sit back on feet, keeping a firm grip on the middle muscles by pulling up and in. Arms should be held out at sides, shoulder level. From that position, bend sidewards and touch fingers to floor, back to center, bend to the other side . . . and continue 12 to 25 counts. Don't slump and don't overdo.

Last, from the position of lying flat on back on floor, feet anchored under heavy piece of furniture, arms stretched up on floor overhead, come up to sitting position and, keeping that strong up-pull on the middle muscles, go on over and touch toes with fingers. Three times may be enough the first few sessions. Later you should be able to do this without anchoring feet. Then the stop signal is when the feet start coming up off the floor.

Restoring Off-White Cloth

If white clothing seems a poor color to you as you are ironing it, immediately after removing it from the ironing board and while it is still hot from the iron, hang it out in the hot sun. It will bleach it beautifully.

Care of the African Violet

Keep the pot of African violets in a deep saucer and water it from the bottom always. When the saucer is empty add more water. Place the violet where it gets a little sun in the morning and never let it have hot sun on it for hours at a time. You will find the violet plant will keep healthy and bloom frequently if this is done.

No One But You

The world is wonderful today . . . And all the skies are bright . . . And when the sun goes down I know . . . There will be stars tonight . . . A thousand silver stars around . . . A moon of golden hue . . . To tell the silent universe . . . How much I treasure you . . . My heart is happy and my soul . . . Is light as it can be . . . Because I have your promise that . . . Your heart belongs to me . . . I wander in a garden where . . . The fragrant flowers blood . . . And there is no delusion or . . . The vagary of gloom . . . Because I love you and because . . . Whatever moon or sun . . . I know that no one else but you . . . Will be my only one.

Have We Been Too Nice To Bus Drivers?

Herb Harris of 1121 N. Kensington st., Arlington, Va., thinks I've been too nice to our local bus drivers.

Herb wants to know why I never write about the kind of driver who:

1. Growls "Move ta da reara da bus" when movement in any direction is completely impossible.

2. Starts with a shuddering, grinding, soul-searing series of jerks; stops by slamming on the brakes in a manner calculated to land everybody on the floor.

3. Lets you break all records for the 100-yard dash and then slams the door in your face and drives off.

4. Thinks he is a modern Barney Oldfield, and loves to speed up on particularly rough stretches of road.

There's no denying that many bus drivers are guilty of one or more of the foregoing transgressions.

Almost to a man, they act as if they have a priority over all other traffic.

When they pull into the curb to discharge passengers, the rear end of the bus is usually left protruding out into the stream of traffic—even when there's plenty of room to get it in where it won't constitute a hazard.

And when they're ready to start up again—brother, you'd better slam on your brakes and let 'em cut in ahead of you.

MISCELLANY

Is there a more courteous, cheerful bunch of salespeople in town than at the local Eastman Kodak store on 14th st.? . . . Mrs. Louise K. Bissell of 5522 Fairglen lane, Chevy Chase, Md., says that our very best Washington Post carrier boy isn't working right now. "He's David Shephard, who is in the hospital recovering from an operation." . . . Hurry up and recover, Dave; good carriers can't be spared . . . The other day we raised an eyebrow about the liquor ad which suggested: "Buy by the case at this low price; limit, 3 bottles to a customer." Calvert Liquors on Wisconsin ave. report that the limit was supposed to be "3 cases" instead of bottles, and add: "We were pleased by the error; now we know how many people read our ads in The Washington Post" . . . Our discussion of "diplomatic immunity" to traffic regulations moves D. J. Allen of 3377 Wisconsin ave. nw. to remark that he's getting pretty sick of "diplomats" who purposely disregard our laws, just because they know they won't be prosecuted. He suggests that a few stiff fines and maybe an occasional trip to the cooler might be the answer . . . Bill and Ellen Rawson of 2223 Washington ave., Silver Spring, Md., came down with a bad case of flat-tire-itis while motoring past the Ice Palace on Connecticut ave. the other night. What was worse, they had no screw driver, so they couldn't remove the hub cap of the disabled wheel. But the driver of American Cab 189 stopped to offer aid, loaned them a screw driver, then delivered his fare and came back later to pick up the screw driver and make sure all was well with the Rawsons. (The jockey on American 189 is Marien Davis of 1657 C st. ne.) . . . The irrepressible Nate Leiderman wants to know whether it's true that the electricians will go out on strike if their current demands are not met . . . And if that isn't shocking enough, Marian Kallis of 5913 4th st. nw. wants to know whether Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle got bored of education?

STREET(CAR) SCENE

Clara M. Cassidy of 1816 Belmont rd. nw. reports that the newspaper strike had more varied effects than was generally realized.

Last Wednesday morning, when there were no morning papers available, she saw a woman on a streetcar reading Godey's Lady's Book for 1889—Easter Edition.

Come to think of it, some of those styles would be quite fashionable today.

EASTER BONNET

A little piece of ribbon
An imitation rose
A straw or two to hold them
And off to church she goes.

A girl is always happy
With flowers on her head;
For Easter hats are tokens
To prove that Winter's dead.
Pop Grey.

ADD SIMILES

"As quickly as a woman can change from the voice she uses to give her husband what-for to the one she uses to answer the telephone."

No One But You

The world is wonderful today . . . And all the skies are bright . . . And when the sun goes down I know . . . There will be stars tonight . . . A thousand silver stars around . . . A moon of golden hue . . . To tell the silent universe . . . How much I treasure you . . . My heart is happy and my soul . . . Is light as it can be . . . Because I have your promise that . . . Your heart belongs to me . . . I wander in a garden where . . . The fragrant flowers blood . . . And there is no delusion or . . . The vagary of gloom . . . Because I love you and because . . . Whatever moon or sun . . . I know that no one else but you . . . Will be my only one.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Have We Been Too Nice To Bus Drivers?

Herb Harris of 1121 N. Kensington st., Arlington, Va., thinks I've been too nice to our local bus drivers.

Herb wants to know why I never write about the kind of driver who:

1. Growls "Move ta da reara da bus" when movement in any direction is completely impossible.

2. Starts with a shuddering, grinding, soul-searing series of jerks; stops by slamming on the brakes in a manner calculated to land everybody on the floor.

3. Lets you break all records for the 100-yard dash and then slams the door in your face and drives off.

4. Thinks he is a modern Barney Oldfield, and loves to speed up on particularly rough stretches of road.

There's no denying that many bus drivers are guilty of one or more of the foregoing transgressions.

But on the whole, I think they're a pretty good bunch of guys—except for one thing.

Almost to a man, they act as if they have a priority over all other traffic.

When they pull into the curb to discharge passengers, the rear end of the bus is usually left protruding out into the stream of traffic—even when there's plenty of room to get it in where it won't constitute a hazard.

And when they're ready to start up again—brother, you'd better slam on your brakes and let 'em cut in ahead of you.

MISCELLANY

Is there a more courteous, cheerful bunch of salespeople in town than at the local Eastman Kodak store on 14th st.? . . . Mrs. Louise K. Bissell of 5522 Fairglen lane, Chevy Chase, Md., says that our very best Washington Post carrier boy isn't working right now. "He's David Shephard, who is in the hospital recovering from an operation." . . . Hurry up and recover, Dave; good carriers can't be spared . . . The other day we raised an eyebrow about the liquor ad which suggested: "Buy by the case at this low price; limit, 3 bottles to a customer." Calvert Liquors on Wisconsin ave. report that the limit was supposed to be "3 cases" instead of bottles, and add: "We were pleased by the error; now we know how many people read our ads in The Washington Post" . . . Our discussion of "diplomatic immunity" to traffic regulations moves D. J. Allen of 3377 Wisconsin ave. nw. to remark that he's getting pretty sick of "diplomats" who purposely disregard our laws, just because they know they won't be prosecuted. He suggests that a few stiff fines and maybe an occasional trip to the cooler might be the answer . . . Bill and Ellen Rawson of 2223 Washington ave., Silver Spring, Md., came down with a bad case of flat-tire-itis while motoring past the Ice Palace on Connecticut ave. the other night. What was worse, they had no screw driver, so they couldn't remove the hub cap of the disabled wheel. But the driver of American Cab 189 stopped to offer aid, loaned them a screw driver, then delivered his fare and came back later to pick up the screw driver and make sure all was well with the Rawsons. (The jockey on American 189 is Marien Davis of 1657 C st. ne.) . . . The irrepressible Nate Leiderman wants to know whether it's true that the electricians will go out on strike if their current demands are not met . . . And if that isn't shocking enough, Marian Kallis of 5913 4th st. nw. wants to know whether Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle got bored of education?

STREET(CAR) SCENE

Clara M. Cassidy of 1816 Belmont rd. nw. reports that the newspaper strike had more varied effects than was generally realized.

Last Wednesday morning, when there were no morning papers available, she saw a woman on a streetcar reading Godey's Lady's Book for 1889—Easter Edition.

Come to think of it, some of those styles would be quite fashionable today.

EASTER BONNET

A little piece of ribbon
An imitation rose
A straw or two to hold them
And off to church she goes.

A girl is always happy
With flowers on her head;
For Easter hats are tokens
To prove that Winter's dead.
Pop Grey.

ADD SIMILES

"As quickly as a woman can change from the voice she uses to give her husband what-for to the one she uses to answer the telephone."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

A Lobby Interprets the News

By Drew Pearson

The late and lamented Eightieth Congress was widely publicized as one of the most lobby-ridden in many years and probably deserved that reputation. When it was thrown out of office last November, Democratic leaders announced that the Eighty-first Congress would immediately start an investigation of lobbyists, and to that end conscientious Senator Kilgore introduced a resolution calling for a sweeping probe.

PEARSON

That resolution is still stymied in the Senate Judiciary Committee where Senator Wiley (R., Wis.) is staging a one-man filibuster in the subcommittee.

Meanwhile the new Eighty-first Congress is just about as lobby-ridden as the old—possibly more so. There is one big difference, however. This time the lobbyists have been smarter. They work in disguise. One device is to pressure a few key business friends in a Congressman's home district. Another amazing device has just been uncovered.

Most Senators and Representatives don't realize it, but one of the most adroitly organized lobbies in Washington supplies them with an analysis and summary of pending bills every morning.

What most of the Congressmen don't know is that this lobby is financed by some of the most powerful manufacturers in the United States, which means that big business has arranged to have its own nutshell digests of pending legislation placed on the desks of Senators and Representatives every morning.

Since Congressmen are harassed and busy people, and since it is extremely difficult to keep up with all legislation, it is a great convenience to have legislation summarized and digested. However, any slanting of those digests or any questions asked in the memos accompanying the digests can influence the entire Congress on important issues.

Enterprise Association

The lobby which concocted this extremely clever way of swaying Congress has adopted the dignified and all-embracing name of the American Enterprise Association. It also hides behind some high-sounding camouflage about being an "educational and nonpartisan body . . . tries to be impartial in its work . . . takes no stand either in favor or against proposed legislative measures."

Yet its contributors and officers are some of the most influential big businessmen in the country, most of whom support the militant National Association of Manufacturers and the Foundation for Economic Education, crusaders against rent control, aid to education, the national health program and other measures which might increase corporation taxes.

The officers include: Lewis H. Brown, board chairman of Johns-Manville; former Senator Sinclair Weeks of Massachusetts, president of United Car Fastener; Robert L. Lund, past president of NAM; Fred A. Poor, president of Poor & Co., and N. Baxter Jackson, president of Chemical Bank & Trust.

Among the moret active trustees are Alfred C. Fuller, founder of Fuller Brush Co.; Edward H. Little, president of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet; Hughston M. McBain, president of Marshall Field; Henry F. Bristol, president of Bristol-Myers; B. E. Hutchinson, financial chairman of Chrysler; Wilfred Sykes, president of Inland Steel; Thomas Drever, president of American Steel Founders, and Henry D. Sharpe, president of Brown & Sharpe.

In Martin's Office

Guiding genius of the American Enterprise Association is Guy Wyatt, former advertising sales manager of American Foundry Equipment. The association's Washington representative is Malcolm Hardgrove, formerly with the Irving Trust Co. at No. 1 Wall st.

Hardgrove is not registered as a lobbyist yet he admitted to this column that he visits "20 to 50" members of Congress daily. He also seems to be about as skillful at getting his ideas across to Congress and getting information out of Congress as anyone in the game.

Among other things Hardgrove pays a man in the office of former Speaker Joe Martin, named William Patten, to slip him material. Patten, when interviewed, admitted slipping material to Hardgrove, but swore it was stuff Martin was "through with." Patten also admitted taking cash for the job but wouldn't say how much. Other sources indicated that Hardgrove slipped Patten $20 from time to time and charged it up on his expense account as "contribution."

This astute backstage wirepuller also has a close friend in Joe Martin's office who arranges contacts with other Congressmen. He is the former Speaker's assistant, Jim Milne. When interviewed, Milne said he hardly knew Hardgrove.

"I've met him five or six times," he shrugged. "He came into the office about the first of the year."

"What did he want then?"

"He wanted us to subscribe for the bill analyses."

Milne had already mentioned the fact that Joe Martin had been taking the lobby's legislative analyses for some time, so Milne was asked why it was necessary to subscribe again.

"Well," Milne faltered. "Hardgrove wanted to make sure we renewed."

Real Estate Ties

Actually Hardgrove not only influences congressional thinking by analyzing pending legislation for Congressmen but writes speeches for them and furnishes them with various material.

He also has secret ties with the real estate lobby through Eddie Carr, former president of the National Association of Home Builders, and used to meet on the q. t. with the real estate committee, made up of Carr, Waverly Taylor, Clark Daniel and Joe Deckman, all big builders.

Number 10 in a Series... Hecht Co. Personalities in the News

Matinees Every Monday...

SAYS DOROTHY FAULKNER, TRAINING DIRECTOR OF THE HECHT CO.

This is DOROTHY FAULKNER. If you want to know "whodunit" in any of those pocket size mystery stories . . . just ask our blue-eyed . . . medium blonde Training Director. She's read them all . . . or almost all. They're her favorite pastime . . along with swimming and bicycling. Our schoolmistress hails from Lynchburg, Va., and has been with The Hecht Co. 20 years . . . welcoming new associates . . making new friends . . . keeping her old friends.

No tickets are sold to our "Monday Matinees" . . . yet the audience is as enthusiastic as first-nighters. The spectators . . . as many as 1,000 a month . . . are our store associates. In the auditorium they watch true-life lessons in selling unreeled . . . learning the fine points of merchandising . . . learning how to help you.

It was our Miss Faulkner's belief in "visual" education which led The Hecht Co. to establish this movie-program of training and build our own "Little Theater." As Training Director, Miss Faulkner plans and arranges training programs. Induction classes are held for new associates . . . a three-day course of orientation for salespeople as well as those filling service positions. Here they learn the "hows" and "wherefores" of The Hecht Co. Retraining courses are given regularly to keep our big family of associates up to date on the latest fashion trends . . . new accounting methods . . . wrapping . . . advertising . . . and the many varied aspects of present day store-keeping. Promotional or Executive training courses prepare our associates for supervisory positions.

In Miss Faulkner's broad experience with this fast growing store, she has become convinced . . . that the most effective way of teaching selling . . . is to show selling in the act. The Hecht Co.'s "Monday Matinees" do just that . . . with films . . . charts . . . slides . . . and an efficient staff of teachers. The reward is a smoother selling operation, a courteous, well-educated selling staff, a coordinated community serving a community. Not that we are perfect . . . but we are constantly striving for perfection. Matinee every Monday is just one of the many innovations which make The Hecht Co. a great place to work . . . a great place to shop.
